FIRE ON A MOB.

Ohio Troops Prevent a Lynching

But Kill Three Men and Wound Several Others.

After Being Warned Repeatedly

They Break Open the Door and Receive

A Volley of Bullets From the Soldiers.

Prisoner, Convicted in a Rush and Sentenced to Twenty Years in Prison, Saved for His Legal Punishment.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Ohio, Oct. 17—William Dolby, colored, who a week ago criminally assaulted Mrs. Mary C. Boyd aged fifty five, at Parrot's station, near here, and was captured at Delaware, Ohio, was brought into court yesterday afternoon He plead guilty and was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary.

An angry mob gathered about the jail after Dolby had been identified by his victim and Sheriff Cook called to his assistance the local militia company. This action increased the fury against Dolby and Governor McKinley was appealed to for additional assistance and troops from Columbus were sent here, Colonel Colt in command.

The mob surrounded the jail and court house, attempted to take Dolby from the officers, when removed from jail to the court house for trial but were kept at bay by the free use of bayonets and clubbed with guns. No one was seriously hurt.

The mob was kept at bay until 6 p. m., when it made an attack. The militia repulsed them without firing, but at 6:45 p. m. the south door was forced. This door opens upon the street, which was filled with men, women and children. The guards fired on the attacking party but none of the latter were hurt, but a dozen persons in the street were struck, two killed out right and four fatally injured. The killed are:

James Judy, aged twenty-five.

Smith Welch, aged nineteen.

The wounded:

Hugh Ammerman, shot through hip; dangerous.

Emert Ellis, thumb shot off.

Mack Johnson, of Williamsburg, Clermont county, shot through bowels; will die

George Keating, fourteen years old, shot through leg and groin.

John Korn, shot in foot

John McCune, shot in leg.

F. L. Nitterhouse, shot through both ankles, one foot almost severed.

Rial Parrott, shot in foot.

William Sams, fatally shot through the bowels.

Frank Smith, flesh wound in face.

All night an angry crowd surrounded the jail and muttered threats, but there was no actual violence, after the guards had fired on the attacking party.

COLUMBUS Ohio, Oct. 18—Jasper Dolby, the negro sentenced at Washington C. H, to twenty years imprisonment for a criminal assault on a most estimable white woman, an old lady, was landed in the penitentiary at 7 o'clock this morning He was escorted here by Sheriff Cook and Deputy Busick, accompanied on the train by the Columbus companies of the Ohio National guard. The prisoner was taken from the train at Dennison avenue, not coming into the Union station and walked to the prison, one wall of which is on the avenue. The military remained in the cars and were carried to the Union station. All troops have left Washington C. H.

A Columbus Dispatch reporter, who came up with the train, states that after midnight things at the Court House quieted down very much The citizens had nearly all gone home Yet many persons stood on the neighboring corners until a much later hour discussing the affairs, as may be readily imagined in connection with such a terrible sensation as the killing of two men and the wounding of eleven others by the military. Some of those people who remained about the court house were supposed to be in a plot to blow up the building with dynamite. There had been so much talk about a possible occurrence of that kind, based upon what seemed to be reliable evidence, that the vigilance of the guard was not relaxed in the least.

The military, all told, until 3:30 a. m., numbered less than 100 men. Against the surging hundreds of men who crowded into or about the court house, this small band had kept up a determined front for twelve or fifteen hours. Finally, when the First regiment from Cincinnati and the two companies from the Fourteenth at Columbus arrived at about 3:30 a m, a square was formed by the men of the Fourteenth, and escorted by the First, the line of march for the cars was taken up, the negro being in the square. He had been in the court house about twelve hours, the officers not daring to attempt to return him to jail, after the sentence had been passed. En route to the cars in the early morning nothing of interest occurred, except that a good many people were still on the streets Beyond an occasional voice in the stillness of the hour, uttering threats and disapproval, the affair closed in a rather weird way.

Just before the troops left the death of G W. Johnson, or 'Mac" Johnson, as the reporter called him, was announced, making three dead. He was shot in the stomach and lived at Kyles, Butler county, Ohio.

The old man, Frank Niedrhause, aged seventy, shot in the leg and suffering amputation, cannot survive He was the only prominent citizen injured. The other injured men, it would seem, belonged to a class who would be likely to get into a place of this kind Theodore Ammerman, aged twenty-two, at last accounts is still in a critical condition.

The reinforcements called for by Sheriff Cook at 4 p m, yesterday, not arriving until 3:30 this morning, and the shooting of the citizens having occurred about 7 p. m., has set on foot an investigation to ascertain whether the cause of delay in arrival of the reinforcements was due to the railroad company or the military department.

It is proper to state that the soldiers had to be gathered from their respective vocations or homes. The Columbus companies were held here to wait for a Maryville company and left at 11 p. m. It is thirty-nine miles to Washington C. H The train stopped at Mt Sterling, twenty-three miles from here, to pick up a company.

The Cincinnati troops, according to the statement of a railroad man, were to arrive at Washington C. H by the same line but from the opposite direction, and were to be timed so as to arrive simultaneously with the troops from Columbus.

Inquiry alone can determine the cause of delay in arrival. The criticism is that a greater promptness on the part of somebody might have saved the loss of life

COLUMBUS Ohio, Oct. 18—Gov. McKinley, being asked about the affair as to what he desired to say, said:

"The act speaks for itself. Troops were sent to act in aid of the civil authorities, who were powerless to quell a mob that was seeking to overthrow the law and its orderly administration."

The governor was up all night in a sleeping car and in direct communication until 3 30 a m. with his adjutant general and came through Washington C. H. about 6 a m, having left Cincinnati at 3:30 a. m, the car having stood in the Cincinnati station until time for the departure of the train. The governor says he will not leave Ohio so long as there is possibility of trouble. He has formally withdrawn the troops He has received a number of telegrams to the effect that his "stand for law and its proper enforcement will be heartily approved of by all wise lovers of state and country." He has canceled speaking engagements at Louisville and Nashville and the meeting at New Orleans will depend upon the developments of today. The feeling here is that the governor would be justified in going to New Orleans, but he says: "It is better to stay here a little too long than to go a little too soon"

The prisoner stated to the penitentiary officials that he was not guilty, but had entered a plea of guily because he had been informed that he was to be mobbed and that this was the only way to escape with his life. He claimed never to have been arrested or charged with the slightest infraction of law. Dr. Irvin, in making the physical examination, said Dolby's legs trembled and his heart fluttered as a result of his scare. The fact in this case is that he was clearly identified by his victim.

MACCABEES TORN UP.

Recorder Boughton's Failure to Qualify is Causing Trouble.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich, Oct 18—Great Commander N. S. Boynton, of the Michigan Maccabees, has appointed Thomas Watson, of Roscommon, now lieutenant commander, to succeed Joseph Boughton, who failed to qualify as great record keeper. Henry W. Carey, of Manistee, now chaplain, is made lieutenant commander, and the office of chaplain he has offered to Oscar Allyn, of this city, but Allyn declines with thanks After a hot fight at the annual convention in September Boughton was elected record keeper in place of Boynton, who has held it fifteen years, and Boynton was elected commander. The Maccabees constitution calls for $25,000 bond with three sureties for the record keeper, and Boughton was vouched for by two eastern indemnity companies. Boynton declared this insufficient, and the time expiring yesterday, he declared the office vacant Boughton's friends will not give up without a fight, and the organization will be torn by the dissension.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield Are Again United.

Each Thought the Other Dead and Did Not Discover the Mistake in a Score of Years.

NEW YORK, Oct 18—Edward Sheffield, of Melbourne, Australia, and Ellen, his wife, of Helena, Mont, met in the law office of Richard V. Boyd, No. 18 Wall street, last night, for the first time in twenty years Each had believed the other dead, but each had remained faithful The man had become bronzed, burly and bearded since his wife had seen him, and she had grown plump and comely, with her forty years,

This romance was begun nearly a quarter of a century ago in Southampton, England Sheffield was a bluff and honest young seaman, the captain of a ship His home was in Dover, but his ship loaded at Southampton once, and there he met pretty Ellen Marshall. She was a bright-eyed, rosy young girl, full of good spirits, and Sheffield loved her and told her so. But the course of love did not run smooth for Edward Sheffield, even in his courtship days.

Wm Porter was a young merchant of Southampton and he, too, loved pretty Ellen Marshal. He proved a hard fighting rival, and had more to offer than did the sailor man, for his business was prosperous But in the end the bluff sailor won the victory and the girl. Edward and Ellen were married and set up a little home, and when Edward was away on voyages, his young wife waited and worried.

She always feared that disaster would overtake him, and sure enough disaster did They had been married about two years when Edward's ship was charted for Brazil. It was a long voyage and the wife was nearly heart broken. But Edward was full of grit. He cheered his young wife as best he could, feeling so sick at heart himself, and sailed away. But a storm struck the vessel and wrecked it The sailors took to small boats and all were lost. The captain stuck to the wreck and was saved He clung for days to the wave washed hulk, calling upon Heaven for help till a passing schooner hove to and took him aboard. He was landed friendless and penniless on the South American coast. He had terrible experiences of want and hunger. Meantime he must live, so he turned his hand to any sort of work he could find in the wretched South American towns where fate had cast him.

He saved what he could, and after years scraped together enough to take him home, only to find that his wife had gone. Edward inquired of his old-time rival, and Porter told him maliciously that Mrs. Sheffield had gone off to America with another man. Edward could not believe it at first, but Porter brought proofs. The young fellow left at once for Australia He bought a small ranch near Melbourne and took to sheep farming Success was slow but sure. He became moderately rich, but he never married, though he heard his wife was dead. While going through his sea chest some months ago Sheffield found memoranda concerning five hundred acres of land in Montana, which he had bought for a song twenty five years ago from a land agency and had forgotten. He wrote to Olive Pritchard, a London lawyer, to look the matter up and see if the land was worth anything. Pritchard wrote to Lawyer Boyd, of this city, and he communicated with a lawyer in Helena, which was near the lands in question. The reply was that a Mrs. Sheffield had shown deeds for the lands and sold most of the acres at a high price as silver had been found in several places. Mrs. Sheffield was a widow, the Helena lawyer reported, and was living at Helena. The rest came about quite naturally. Mrs. Sheffield was communicated with. She wrote that she had waited for years at home until perfectly satisfied that her husband was dead. News of the shipwreck had reached Southampton. Then she took the deeds for the Montana lands and came to America to see what she could sell them for. She was amazed to find herself rich. As for the story that she had run off with another man, that was a whole cloth fabrication of Porter's She had been faithful to her husband's memory.

Husband and wife, so long parted, hastened to unite their lives once more. It was decided to settle in Montana, so Sheffield sold his Australian ranch and crossed the water, and Mrs. Sheffield came east to meet him. The first interview, in Mr. Boyd's Wall street office, was a very brief one. They started west at once.

MAYOR DENNY PROMPT.

Orders His Policemen to Enforce the Indianapolis Liquor Law.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct 18—The developments resulting from the visit of officers of the Good Citizens' league to the saloons on Sunday, nine out of ten of which were found to be defying the law, have created a sensation here and Mayor Denny has addressed a letter to the police board demanding that the effort to enforce the law shall be more pronounced and the police held to the strictest accountability for violations occurring in their respective districts The mayor requests the board, in view of the developments of last Sunday, to appoint and swear in as many extra men as the superintendent may think necessary to detect violations, and says that if the appropriations for the force is not large enough to meet the extra expense he will ask the council for more money. He emphasizes his opposition to the saloons when they assume the attitude of lawbreakers and says they must be closed and kept closed.

DEED OF DEMONS.

Place Dynamite on the Tracks to Blow Up a Train.

They Get the Explosive on the Wrong Track and Wreck an Accommodation Instead of Express.

PITTSBURG, Pa, Oct. 18—What is believed to have been a desperate attempt at train robbery was made last night near this city on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. At eight o'clock an east-bound accommodation train ran over a dynamite cartridge, near Bissell, at a very lonely spot about fifteen miles from Pittsburg. The flange of one wheel was blown off and one end of a coach wrecked. As the train had nearly reached the end of its trip, there were few passengers aboard and no one was injured An examination of the track was made and two more powerful dynamite cartridges were found on the rails Had the train been running fast it would have exploded all three cartridges and have been totally wrecked. It is pretty well known that the intention was to wreck the mail and express, a through train from the east, due a few minutes later, but the robbers made a mistake and placed the cartridges on the east-bound track instead of the west-bound. Arrests are expected today.

THE BOILER EXPLODED.

Sending Scalding Water Over the Bossuk Family,

And Bring to the Attention of the Police an Illicit Distillery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—The boiler of an illicit still, in a tenement house on Clinton street, exploded this morning, severely scalding Paulina and Jennie Bossuk, mother and child, respectively aged thirty years and fourteen months and John Jobesky, twenty-two years old. The woman's husband, Herman, supposed to be the owner and operator of the still, ran away after the explosion, leaving his wife and child crying for help. The boiler was made of sheet iron and was five by three feet in dimension. A dozen barrels of mash were in the room. Revenue officers have taken charge of the still and the finished and unfinished liquor on hand. The still is only about a block from a police station.

STRAUS MAY DECLINE TO RUN.

Dispute About the State Ticket Has Led to a Crisis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—The crisis has been reached in the mayoralty fight in this city, which may end in Nathan Straus' refusal to head the Tammany ticket. Many of the leaders of Tammany hall are opposed to Senator Hill permitting his name to be placed at the head of the state democracy ticket, which is also the republican county ticket, and is headed by Colonel Strong for mayor. It was said that some of Nathan Straus' closest personal and political friends were also opposed to this. The argument is made that voters who will go to the polls to ballot for the straight democratic ticket may be fooled into voting the antis' ticket. They might see a ballot headed by David B Hill for governor and perhaps vote it without discovering that it was a state democratic ballot with William L. Strong for mayor and the other anti-Tammany hall candidates printed upon it. Senator Hill is in favor of permitting this, and a controversy has arisen between him and Mr. Straus on this subject. Conferences of Tammany leaders were held yesterday to consider this phase of the campaign and unless the matter is settled so that no injury will result to Tammany Mr. Straus will refuse to run for mayor. He is withholding his letter of acceptance to await a final decision of the question.

SWINDLED KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Postoffice Authorities Working on a Big Case of Fraud.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18—The postoffice inspectors are working on frauds perpetrated upon Knights of Pythias lodges all over the country. The inspectors are reticent because their work is not completed, and the knights will not talk except to say that the fraud was probably committed by a member of the order and their officials turned the case over to the postal inspectors. Bogus sick benefit orders have been presented to lodges all over the country and cashed, securing $20 from each lodge. All signs and grips are said to be used by the swindler and blank orders were stolen from different lodges. At Logansport, Ind., 1,000 blank orders and the seal were stolen from Apollo lodge room. These blanks, duly filled out, were cashed at Bellow Falls, Mo., Rutland, Vt, and other eastern points.

The adjusters have settled the loss on the recent Moellinger fire. The firm got $42,000 in cash, the insurance men taking the salvage and allowing the firm $6,500 therefor. It was one of the quickest and most satisfactorily adjusted losses ever settled in this city.

The funeral of Mrs Mary Frosch will take place from Rev. Franke's Lutheran church, five miles out from the city, tomorrow. Through a misunderstanding the funeral was announced in the city papers to take place this morning.

Mrs. J. W. Tribolet and daughter, Maud, are in the city visiting friends.

THE CZAR WORSE.

So Weak That He Cannot Bear a Journey,

And the Proposed Removal From Nalta to the South Coast of the Crimea Has Been Abandoned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 18—It is announced here that the condition of the czar has perceptibly changed for the worse. It is added that his symptoms of general debility and weakness of the heart are more pronounced.

The Grand Duke Serguis and Paul brothers of the czar, started for Livadia today. An official dispatch indicating the sudden gravity of the czar's condition was sent to Darmstadt yesterday, and a reply was received today saying that the grand duke of Hesse Darmstadt and the grand duchess Serguis, his sister, had started for St Petersburg. The news from Livadia has caused consternation in St. Petersburg, and there is a general feeling that the end may bee xpected at any day. Consequently great anxiety is experienced regarding the consequences of the czar's sudden demise.

LONDON, Oct 18—The reports in circulation regarding the czar's health, that his condition has changed for the worse and that he may not be able to leave Yalta for Corfu, have caused a sensation here and probably in view of the previous reports which have led people to believe that he was in no immediate danger. It is now considered that there is no little doubt that a decided turn for the worse has taken place and that the czar may be in a more dangerous state than the most alarming reports have hitherto stated.

The anxiety regardieg the health of the Czar was increased today by the receipt of a despatch from St Petersburg distinctly announcing that the condition of the Czar has perceptibly changed for the worse, and people are trying to read between the lines of the official bulletin published by the official messenger, of St. Petersburg, on Tuesday last, many interpreting the announcement on that day to mean that the Czar is unable to bear the journey to Corfu.

The official messenger, as already cabled on Tuesday last, in a special edition, published the following bulletin, which was signed by Professors Leyden, Zacharine, Popoff and Behaminoff, the physicians in attendance on the Czar:

"After consultation, we find that the disease of the kidneys shows no improvement His majesty's strength has diminished, but the physicians in attendance hope that the climate of the south coast of the Crimea will have a beneficial effect upon the health of the czar."

It will readily be seen that an unfavorable interpretation can easily be made of the above bulletin and that it is not astonishing that it has given rise to additional reports of an alarming nature in spite of the fact that every preparation has been made to receive his majesty at Corfu.

INTERESTING STORY

Brought Out by a Law Suit Begun at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct 18—A suit with an interesting story behind it has been filed in this city by Mrs Elizabeth S. Moxley against Elizabeth W. H Doe, sometimes called Elizabeth J Moxley, for the possession of property valued at $200,000 located on five residence streets in this city The plaintiff, who is sixty seven years old, is a resident of Baltimore She has deposed that in 1849 she was married to John Smith Moxley in Baltimore. Three weeks after the marriage her husband left for California to seek his fortune in the gold mines. She wrote him, as directed, to various towns in the state, but received no reply. Three years later Moxley returned to Baltimore, but not to see his wife. The latter met him on the street and conversed with her husband, who gave no satisfactory explanation of his desertion, refusing to return with his wife. He again came to California, and although he made several trips to the east, Mrs Moxley never saw him afterwards Mrs. Moxley supported herself by her needle also acting as governess and housekeeper. From Moxley's brother in California, Mrs. Moxley learned that her husband was living with another woman but no suit for divorce was brought by either party. Mr. Moxley died here two years ago and the women whom he introduced here as his wife took possession of all his property, part of which had previously been deeded to her. This Mrs Moxley claims as community property. Her story is corrorbated by the depositions of her mother and of Moxley's relatives in Baltimore, all of whom ride with the deserted wife.

POPULISTS ARE TOO LATE.

One of Their Judicial Candidates Omitted From the State Ballot.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—The state printer began the printing of the ballots for the November election yesterday, and soon after the presses started the secretary of the populist committee appeared and wanted to file the name of the candidate for judge of the supreme court for the First district. The time for filing the certificates of nomination ended Tuesday and the state officers refused to accept the name of the nominee and it will not be on the state ticket.

Secretary Cummins says that Tuesday was not the last day for filing, as contended by the state officers, and that he will invoke the law to have the ballots destroyed and others printed containing the name of the candidate selected by the committee. The law declares that the certificate shall not be filed more than sixty days and less than twenty days before the election, and the populists claim that yesterday, and not Tuesday, was the last day. When the certificate was offered yesterday several hundred thousand tickets had already been printed

THE COURTS.

Sarah Miller is Again Adjudged Insane.

The Youngker Divorce Suit—Prisoner Escapes From the Court Room—Court Cases.

Justices Wilkinson and Ryan, with Doctors McOscar and Miller, acting as a commission in lunacy, have adjudged Sarah Miller, of this city, to be insane and she will be sent to an asylum. The woman talks incoherently and is violent. One of her insane ideas is that she must preach in a certain church in the country next Sunday. She is sixty five years of age and has twice before been at an insane asylum.

WANTS A DIVORCE

Hannah Youngker has brought suit in the superior court for a divorce from Charles Youngker. B F Harper is the attorney for the plaintiff

PRISONER ESCAPES

Charles Vanderford, a prisoner under arrest and having his preliminary hearing before Justice Ryan, made a bold and daring dash for liberty yesterday afternoon and is now at large

Vanderford is a carpenter, living at 170 West Main street, and was arrested on a charge of illegitimate parentage, preferred by Rosa Damon, a young woman living on Buchanan street While he was waiting for his preliminary hearing in the Justice's office, he went into the back room and jumped from the second story window, thus making his escape.

BURGLAR BOUND OVER.

Sam Jones, charged with housebreaking, was bound over to court by Justice Ryan on the charge of burglary, and in default of bail was sent to jail. Yesterday Jones removed a window from the residence of Jasper Knight, near Dunfee, and was helping himself to the things of the household when Constable Truman, of that township, happened along and arrested him.

Suit has been filed in the superior court by Sylvanus Bowers against Lida Wetherly and others, to quiet a title to real estate. Vesey & Heaton are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

JUDGE O'ROURKE'S VACATION.

The fact that Judge John Morris has been called in by the attorneys to sit on the bench during the trial of the Carier will cause in the circuit court gives Judge Edward O'Rourke a deserved and needed vacation of several days, although considerable of his time is taken up while this case is on trial in attending to other court matters which come up for consideration. Judge O'Rourke's court transacts a large amount of legal business and as a consequence he is kept pretty closely confined during the greatest part of the year. His vacation just now gives him an opportunity to make some political speeches throughout the county, and this he is doing Last night he spoke in Lake township and had a large audience The judge handles the political questions of the day in an able manner and is a practical and interesting talker. In his years of experience as judge of the circuit court he has proven his eminent fitness for the position which he now holds and for which he is a candidate for re-election, and the people of Allen county will make no mistake by continuing him in office.

RUSSIAN UPHEAVAL.

The Czar's Death Will Be the Signal for Revolt.

The Student Party, the Army and the Clergy Honeycombed With a Conspiracy.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct 18—Dr. George von Schmidt, the German traveler, who claims to have inside advices by mail as to the situation in Russia, said today that he had just received another criptogramic letter indirectly from St. Petersburg which indicated an upheaval when the Czar dies. The student party, the army and the clergy are honeycombed with a conspiracy to set aside the Czarovitz and place Prince George on the throne in spite of the czar's personal wishes. The czar is crazed with fear, and dares not employ Russian physicians for fear they are connected with the conspiracy.

COLORED BICYCLIST.

He Crosses the Continent and Blacking Boots.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18—A colored bicycle rider has crossed the continent from New York to San Francisco on his wheel and blacked several hundred pairs of boots on the way. The wheelman who made the long journey is Boyd Gray, a bootblack whose home is in Yonckers, N. Y. He set out five months ago, and while riding travelled sixty miles a day Wherever he stopped he blacked boots and thus earned enough money to pay his traveling expenses. He had few mishaps on the way and will return as he came.

Two prisoners were up for trial, Louis Gibson and C A Stanley, both drunks. Gibson was sent over and Stanley was let go James King, a plain drunk, paid his fine last night and was let go Officer Jesse Patton has been transferred to Nebraska and Officer Foulks has been given the Calhoun street beat north to Bloomingdale.

CRAZY DRUNK

George Billman, a farmer, who lives on the Bluffton road beyond the county farm, was in the city yesterday and went home last evening very drunk. Billman lives with his brother-in law, Emmett Blakely, and when he reached the home last night began by heaving double-bladed axes at the head of his relatives This playful sport was followed by a hand to hand conflict in which Blakely was cut on the head with a sharp dirk knife Blakely pulled his gun and sent slugs of hot shot at the drunken man, who appeared to catch the bullets in his teeth and then spit them out at his adversary By this time the earth was slippery with gore and Billman, leaving Blakley for dead, ran to the home of a cripple named McLaren and beat him within an inch of his life He then went to the farm house of Charles Fairfield, asked for a blanket and permission to sleep in the barn This he obtained, and going into the haymow, soon fell asleep Deputy Sheriffs Harrod and Melchiig were by this time hot on the trail, and going to the barn dug Billman out from under the hay, brought him to town and lodged him in jail. Billman is a tough looking fellow of about thirty-five years of age Blakley is not badly hurt.

Billman had his hearing this afternoon before Justice Ryan and was bound over in the sum of $1,000 for assault with intent to kill. Failing to give bond he went to jail.

POTATOES STOLEN.

Last night two thieves made quite a haul on the farm of Henry McFadden, eleven miles west of this city. They drove into his potato patch a carried off twenty-five bushels of fine tubers. Their rig was tracked towards this city.

AFTER BURGLARS

Sheriff Clausmeier this afternoon went to Columbia City to look after two men who stole jewelry and cash from Mrs. Kieger's boarding house, No. 154 Harrison street, a day or so ago.

Sheriff Clausmeier returned last evening from near Leo bringing with him the horse and buggy which early in the week had been stolen from in front of the police station. Sheriff Clausmeier and his deputies had a hard trip after the thief. The chase Tuesday night and yesterday morning was a hot one, but the officer was rewarded. Near Spencerville the thief drove his outfit into a corn field, and without waiting to unhitch the horse turned him loose and fled to the woods The officers followed closely but were unable to locate the fugative and securing the rig drove back to this city. Sheriff Clausmeier has been particularly fortunate in this line of work and out of all the horses stolen during his term of office only one was not recovered and in this case the thief had forty-eight hours start

IT IS CRIMINAL.

Hundreds of Children Exposed to Contagious Disease.

The Board of Health Will (So They Say) Begin to Prosecute Careless Physicians.

Just as soon as City Attorney Ninde returns to Fort Wayne the board of health will (so they say) begin some prosecutions with a view of preventing, if possible, the spread of contagious diseases. These prosecutions will not be confined to any class of citizens, but whoever is criminally careless and jeopardizes the health of the community will be made to feel the strong arm of the law. This applies particularly to those physicians who have refused to report contagious diseases to the board. There have been a great many more of these gentlemen than people would naturally imagine The only excuse which they can possibly offer for this negligence is that it hurts their practice to antagonize their patrons, possibly they also believe it is money in their pockets to aid in the spread of the contagions, but THE SENTINEL is loth to believe any Fort Wayne physician guilty of this.

Dozens of cases are cited by the board of health of physicians absolutely refusing to report to them, but one of the most flagrant is that at No 49 Gay street. Some days ago a child was taken ill in the family living at this place. The disease was said by the attending physician to be merely croup, and this is not paid much attention to by the board, as it is not generally a dangerous disease. After a few days' illness the child died. Upon the undertaker's report the physician returned the cause of death as membranous croup. The funeral, however, was not private, but was attended by a large number of friends of the afflicted family, thus endangering the lives of hundreds of helpless little children. At the time of this funeral another child in the family was ill with sore throat, and this morning it also died.

Not until Monday was a card placed on the residence as a warning and this would possibly never have been done had not one member of the board of health made a personal investigation of the case. Both children died with malignant cases of throat trouble, which is just as contagious under the name of membraneous croup as diphtheria.

This is only one of many cases If diphtheria is so prevalent now, what will it be in the winter and spring? The board of health has wisely determined to make an example of someone and the people will uphold them. There is no time like the present!

HELD FOR MURDER.

Fort Wayne Medical Student Indicted.

Said to Have Murdered a Relative at Athens, Mich.

A. D. Swortz, Who Was in Dr. A. J. Kesler's Office for Two Years, Charged With the Crime.

A. D. Swortz, a student for two terms of the Fort Wayne College of Medicine, has been indicted by the grand jury at Athens, Mich, for the murder of his brother-in-law, Johnson, whom, it is alleged, he shot and threw the body into the river. Swortz left this city last spring at the close of the college term and has since been practicing medicine at Athens. While in this city his conduct was good and he stood high in the esteem of the faculty and his fellow-students.

Johnson married Swortz's sister and it is said that this caused some very ill feeling between the two men.

From Dr. A. J. Kesler some particulars as to Swortz were learned The indicted man was in the doctor's office all the time during the period of his studies at the medical college. During the summer months he was engaged in peddling books. He only took special branches at the college and did not take a general course.

Swortz was quite well known here and was often seen about Beverforden's drug store where he usually loafed.

Swortz was a peculiar sort of a fellow and not inclined to be communicative. He claimed to be sixty-one years of age but in reality was only about thirty-one or thirty-two. He left this city the 25th of last March expecting to return here this fall but did not show up

The murder was particularly atrocious and what the outcome of the grand jury's investigation will be is only conjectured.

Resolved, That this society tender to the bereaved friends of Dr. Brooks its cordial sympathy in their hour of sorrow.

Malarial Poison

Results from atmospheric conditions, unclean premises, imperfect ventilation and more frequently from the deadly SEWER GAS. A general rundown and impoverished condition of the blood ensues, and if not corrected, Catarrh, Bronchitis, and even Consumption maybe the result. S. S. S. promptly corrects all these evil effects.

Mr. J. A. Rice, Ottawa, Kan., writes: For three years I was troubled with Malaria, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was so reduced in flesh, that life lost its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

A CABLEGRAM has been received at the state department from United States Minister Denby, at Pekin, which is calculated to reassure persons who have friends in China and who have been fearful as to their safety. The minister says that the reports of danger to the foreign residents of Pekin are exaggerated. There has been only one instance of an attack on Americans and adequate punishment was meted out at once to the perpetrators. A proclamation has been issued by the authorities enjoining protection for foreigners.

SOME of our city papers are throwing stones at the vehicle ordinance. They can't hit it too hard for us. We believe that when a person pays taxes once on a horse and buggy he ought to be allowed to use the same without any further burdens being imposed on him. While this matter is up for debate we would like to have the ear of the city council for one moment. When you passed this ordinance, following in the footsteps of Indianapolis, why did you fail to add the one great revenue raiser that Indianapolis adopted? That city receives one thousand dollars every year from every brewer that uses the streets. In our city they pay no more than do the owners of other vehicles and yet they have their heavily loaded wagons on the streets nearly all of the time. If Indianapolis was good enough to follow in one case why not in the other? Indianapolis receives many thousand of dollars from this revenue and Fort Wayne, with its outside and inside firms doing business here, could receive as much. We understand that it was sandwiched along with the high license ordinance, and may never be resurrected.

A Sober Statement.

President George B. Roberts, of the Pennsylvania railroad company, one of the most conservative of the representative men who stand for and powerfully influence the great railroad interests of the United States, has given to the public his views on the economic outlook in this country in an interview published at Philadelphia. Mr. Roberts is successfully directing the largest railroad corporation in the world. Its revenues are more than double the entire revenues of this government a generation ago, and it is the one great artery that reaches into every section of the land and feels every pulsation of commerce, industry and trade. He is not a politician. How he votes, or whether he votes at all, in political contests, but few, if any, know; but he does bring to his exceptionally responsible trust the highest measure of experience, skill and fidelity, as is abundantly shown by the fact that the stock of his company has gone through the convulsions of last year with only the slightest variation in its value on the market. Regarding the recent panic and the business outlook, Mr. Roberts says:

"The recent panic, which began in 1893, and the natural result, an industrial depression, which still continues, was largely the natural outgrowth of speculation in all kinds of securities representing no real value. A large mass of railroad securities and of 'industrials' equally worthless had been put upon the market, and the financial panic was the legitimate result of the discovery of their worthlessness; it was at first a bankers' panic, rather than a commercial or industrial one. Its first fruits were a paralysis of our industries, from which the manufacturers of the country are now slowly recovering. I do not believe that there will be a speedy or radical rebound from that depression, but I do look for a gradual and general improvement, which will be evidenced by an active demand for paying investments on the part of capitalists. During the depression the money capital of the country has been almost valueless, inasmuch as it brought its possessors practically no returns; it will now, I think, be drawn into active uses, and will stimulate enterprise in many directions, so that we may look for greater activity in all branches of trade and manufacture. So far as my observation goes there is already a general return throughout the country to manufacturing activity; the manufacturers of iron are more active now than for a year past."

Mr. Roberts does not speak to affect political campaigns. He speaks solely for the great industrial interests of the country on which his vast railway system depends for its prosperity, and he necessarily studies the causes of panics which make capital halt and give idleness to labor. He tells the exact truth as taught him by the increased business of his great corporation, when he says that he looks for "a gradual and general improvement which will be evidenced by an active demand for paying investments on the part of capital." He is right also in saying that there will not be "a speedy or radical rebound from the depression." Such rebounds are never healthy nor are they enduring, but with the evidence of improvement on every hand, starting in the very fountain of our business channels, it is certain to be as permanent as it is steady. Every point gained in commercial and industrial progress will be maintained; and now, with the setting of every sun, the general condition of the country is better than it was but one day before. On this point Mr. Roberts could not err, for it is only when industry is employed and industrial products demand transportation, that improvement in the great transportation companies of the country can be felt.

The Straightest Tip.

It is the quarter a night that you give the sleeping car porter. The reason it is so straight is that you are putting money straight into the pocket of the sleeping car company. Two dollars a night is not enough tax for these impecunious companies. They must live somehow, and so they levy on the passengers in their cars to get their little spending money. The wages said to be frequently paid to the sleeping car porter is $15 a month and find himself. It is about the average pay that a good kitchen girl gets, with her food and lodging thrown in.

Yet in spite of getting $15 a month from the car company the pay of the colored porter runs often away ahead that of the white conductor of the train. The colored porter wears diamonds and takes his best girl outings to fashionable seaside resorts and orders soft shell crabs and champagne.

The car companies cut down the porter's wages to almost nothing, calculating to the last 25 cents the amount of the tips the porter will levy on the helpless traveler. So the companies get out of paying decent wages, so the traveler is utterly at the mercy of the porter, who can be as mean as he chooses to those who cannot pay.

It is the same in the great hotels that charge $7 a day. They pay the table waiters a trifle, but the table waiters manage to get the rest of the traveler's pile. The consequence of all this is that greedy vulgarians with money and with no foolish scruples about other poeple's rights or convenience get all the best food and the best places at the table. The greedy vulgarians have not yet outgrown the propensities of some of their ancestors with bristles.

Relic Hunting Idiots.

The sculptured face of George Washington in the inside of the great Washington monument back of the White House by the Potomac river has no nose. The nose was chipped off by a relic hunter. That there is a human being alive and walking among white men who is capable of such an atrocity shows how far the world is yet from civilization. What good would the poor mutilated stone nose do the vandal who cut it off? He would scarcely dare show it among his rare art treasures. There certainly is no beauty left in it now, whatever there was originally.

Your relic hunter is in every case such a fool that he has no distinction in himself at all. When he visits the graves of great men or the monuments of antiquity, he thinks it will confer a little borrowed grace on him, to have rubbed against the historic places. The American relic hunting idiot will even punch holes with his umbrella point in the priceless mosaic pavements of Italy just so that he may gratify his back country mania for "showing off" that he has traveled.

Never chip a monument or historic stone. Never snip a tapestry or break a twig from a forbidden locality. Carry the memory of noted objects you have seen in your heart and brain and make a good story telling how you have seen them. Thus the world will know you have been away from home. Remember one of the worst bores in Christendom is the person who has gathered up a lot of sticks and stones and old trash from historic localities and insists on displaying it to your weary eyes.

The more moderate of the French people say they will forgive Germany and take her to their heart again if she will cede back to France Lorraine. She may keep Alsace, they say, for Alsace is more distinctively German in her population than French. If William and his government would do this, then he might even go in peace to Paris to attend the World's fair in 1900, as he has threatened to do. But to give Lorraine back to France is just what Germany will never do—at least hardly ever.

OVERWORK KILLS.

How Few Persons Stop to Think of It.

And How Few Who Are Not Overworking in Some Way.

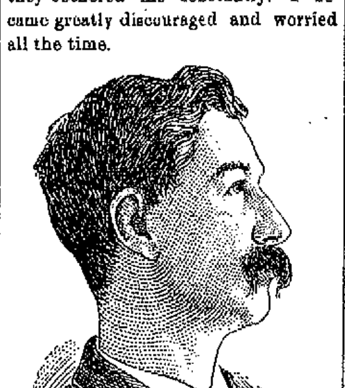

Does This Mean You, Reader?—Are You Not Doing More Than You Ought?

Oh, the millions of tired out, hard-working men and women! Our stores, shops, factories and homes, all have them. They are weakening their systems, ruining their nerves, and laying a foundation for early decay and death! That nervous, weak, and tired feeling at night is a warning of what is coming.

If you feel this way, look out! You will break down just as surely as you don't do something to get strong. Read the terrible experience of D. D. Bulkley, Esq., one of the most popular men of Moretown, Vt.:

"Within the last year I have found myself in a fearfully debilitated and depressed condition from overwork. I was in such a terrible state I could not sleep nights, and was so weak and nervous that the least exertion would completely unnerve me.

"I also had trouble with my kidneys, they bothered me constantly. I became greatly discouraged and worried all the time.

MR. D. D. BULKLEY.

I consulted many physicians, but they did me no good. I also took all kinds of medicines, but without benefit.

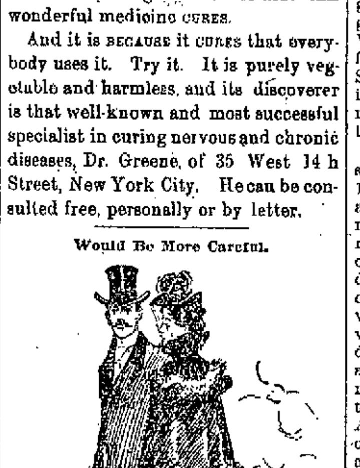

"Finally I was induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I can truly say that in a short time it had done me great good, more than all the other medicines together. Its action on my system was wonderful. I can now sleep well, my nerves are strong and I feel well.

"I owe my cure entirely to that most wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I recommend every sick and suffering person to use it. I know it will cure them."

As a great physician once said, "If these poor sufferers would only be induced to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy they would soon be well and strong." Some people are hard to be convinced, but even the most unbelieving now realize that this wonderful medicine CURES.

And it is BECAUSE it CURES that everybody uses it. Try it. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and its discoverer is that well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14 h Street, New York City. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Would Be More Careful.

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm, and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh. I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrhal smell all left him. He appears as well as any one.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

THE GRAND CHARGE

AT WAGRAM, WHICH HUMBLED AUSTRIA AND DETHRONED AN EMPRESS.

Probably the Model For Pickett's Assault on Cemetery Ridge—One Instance In Napoleon's Career When His Fiery Spirit Was Held In Check.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

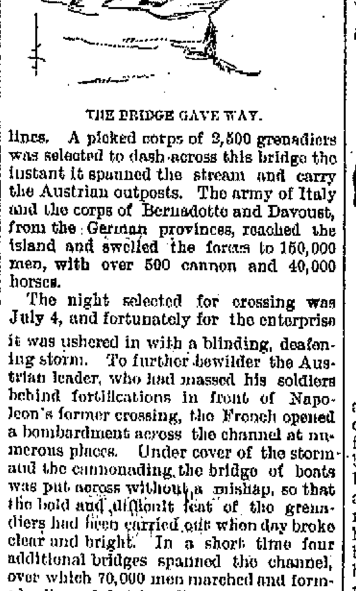

NAPOLEON wasn't necessarily an impulsive fighter. He could bide his time and not fret his soul away in suspense. He once told his marshals during the very heat of battle to hold back their columns from a decisive charge for the space of 20 minutes, in order not to interrupt a false move which the enemy appeared to be making, and which, thanks to his foresight and self control, they carried out, placing victory within his grasp.

The Austrian campaign of Napoleon in 1809, culminating at Wagram, unlike either that of 1805, closing with Austerlitz, or the invasion of Prussia in 1807, ending at Jena, both of which were marvels in way of bold and telling strokes, proceeded with marvelous deliberation and patience. While the emperor's main army of 200,000 men contended with the Spaniards and English in the peninsula, and his garrison detachments were widely scattered along the Rhine and in Italy, his old antagonist, Francis Joseph of Austria, precipitated a new conflict by invading the territory of the French allies forming the confederation of the Rhine. Napoleon promptly ordered his generals in Germany and Italy as well as the reserves in France to march to the banks of the Danube, and the concentration went forward with the usual dispatch. The odds in numbers were likely to be more than two to one against France; hence it was necessary to make up for the lack of soldiers by rapid movements and blows, and in its first stages the campaign of 1809 was like those that had gone before. The emperor reached the front and assumed personal command of the troops on April 17. Five days later he whipped the Austrian leader, Archduke Charles, at Eckmuhl, in Bavaria, completely routing his forces and taking 20,000 prisoners. The Austrians then abandoned the border and left the road open for the French to seize Vienna. On May 13 Napoleon stood in Vienna with 90,000 troops, not half of the number which he had selected to meet him on the Danube, for the spring freshets in mountain rivers blocked their march more effectually than the Austrian bayonets had done. On the other hand, the Archduke Charles, with a freshly recruited army of Austrian veterans, lay intrenched on the opposite side of the river from the capital, while from all parts of the dominions re-enforcements were hastening to join him. The available strength of Austria was placed at 500,000 men, and the problem which Napoleon had to face was how to prevent the concentration of the vast force to crush him. Half of his own troops were not up; an impassable river lay between him and the army, which he deemed it necessary to disperse before it grew more formidable, and the enemy's guns commanded every position available for the crossing of his troops. In this emergency Napoleon transported his army to the island of Lobau, in the Danube six miles below Vienna, where the channels on either side were narrow enough to be spanned by floating bridges.

On the 19th of May, in the night, the crossing was effected over both channels by 20,000 French troops. Next day, with Napoleon at their head, they seized two villages in front of the Austrian camp, and toward its close one village defended by only 7,000 French was attacked by 36,000 Austrians. The other village also became the scene of a desperate battle, and the troops in Vienna were hurried across the single bridge as rapidly as possible. When half of them had crossed and became engaged in desperate fighting to hold the ground, the bridge between the island and Vienna gave way under the force of the flood, carrying a column of troops with it. Soon afterward Lannes, Napoleon's favorite marshal, fell mortally wounded, and reluctantly the army was ordered to retreat to the island.

To most men the disaster would have seemed irreparable. It had cost the French 15,000 men, besides the loss of Lannes and the sting of defeat. But Napoleon recovered his spirits the very night of the retreat after taking a brief nap on a bed of straw. The heroic fighting of his soldiers had caused a loss to the Austrians of nearly 30,000 men, and he argued that weeks would pass before the archduke would recover from the blow. He immediately began preparations for a second attempt, and for this purpose built a permanent bridge to connect the island with the Vienna shore. In order to deceive the Austrians he built heavy fortifications opposite the point of his first crossing and manned them with cannon to sweep the channel. Meanwhile a floating bridge ingeniously devised by Napoleon himself to give with the current, was constructed ready for launching some miles down the channel on the flank of the enemy's lines.

THE BRIDGE GAVE WAY.

A picked corps of 2,500 grenadiers was selected to dash across this bridge the instant it spanned the stream and carry the Austrian outposts. The army of Italy and the corps of Bernadotte and Davoust, from the German provinces, reached the island and swelled the forces to 150,000 men, with over 500 cannon and 40,000 horses.

The night selected for crossing was July 4, and fortunately for the enterprise it was ushered in with a blinding, deafening storm. To further bewilder the Austrian leader, who had massed his soldiers behind fortifications in front of Napoleon's former crossing, the French opened a bombardment across the channel at numerous places. Under cover of the storm and the cannonading the bridge of boats was put across without a mishap, so that the bold and difficult feat of the grenadiers had been carried out when day broke clear and bright. In a short time four additional bridges spanned the channel, over which 70,000 men marched and formed a line of battle. Strange to say, the Austrian leader looked calmly on from the distant heights of Wagram, the center and key point of his position. The Emperor Joseph stood by him, asking the meaning of the strange scene at the channel crossing.

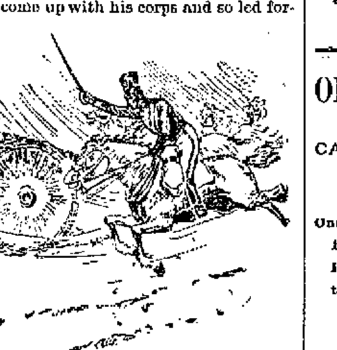

"Sire," said the archduke, "the French have indeed forced the Danube, and I am letting a portion of them pass over that I may throw them into the river."

"Very good," responded his majesty, "but I wouldn't let too many of them come across."

The archduke counted upon destroying that half of Napoleon's army which should be first to cross before the other half could march to the rescue. But yet he waited all day without beginning the attack, so that before nightfall on July 5 the bulk of the French had crossed. The army corps under Massena, Davoust, Bernadotte, Prince Eugene and MacDonald were in position in front of the Austrian center and flanks and everything in readiness to stand and take battle or to plunge forward and deliver it. So much had been accomplished since the disaster in May by patience and pertinacity. Napoleon had let go a weak hold and secured an infinitely superior one. What would he do with it?

In the first place, there existed a possibility that 45,000 fresh Austrian troops under Archduke John would join the enemy on Wagram heights that day from up the Danube, and Napoleon's first move was to dispatch a strong column of all arms to intercept their march. A heavy reserve of cuirasseurs, artillery and the Imperial guard remained on the plains along the river banks, while the corps of Davoust, Eugene, Bernadotte and Massena marched forward to envelop Wagram. The Austrians took the initiative in actual fighting and drove back the French left wing. All the guns of both armies came into play, and more than 1,200 pieces mingled their fire along a battle front nine miles long.

Having hurled back Napoleon's left wing, the Austrian commander in person led his own left across the rivulet of Russbach, which separated the combatants, to assail the French right under Davoust and Grouchy. Napoleon interpreted this boldness to mean that the Archduke John had come up with his corps and so led forward an immense reserve, with which he hurled the Austrians back over the stream, followed by Davoust and Grouchy, who drew up under the heights beyond. The French right secure, Napoleon returned to his left and attempted to recover lost ground there. In this he failed. Massena was wounded and compelled to ride in a carriage. His troops recoiled before the Austrians, and the latter pressed on toward the river until, approaching the old crossing of May opposite Napoleon's batteries on Lobau island, the guns there gave them a sudden and disastrous check. At that moment Napoleon's generals, Massena in particular, urged him to thrust forward the French center and secure the key point at Wagram. But he was immovable, with his eyes fixed upon Davoust's battlefield, where there stood in plain view of all the army a village crowning a height, which the Austrians stubbornly defended. Suddenly the smoke of battle rolled back beyond the village toward the Austrian rear. Davoust had won. The Austrian left had been broken. Turning to an aid, Napoleon exclaimed: "Quick, captain! Tell Massena to fall upon whatever is in front of him." To a general he cried, "Take 100 guns, 60 from my guard, and crush the enemy's column."

CANNON GALLOPED TO THE FRONT.

Then and there burst forth the most terrible artillery fire known to history until the hour of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. And this at Wagram was the prelude of another grand forlorn charge. The 100 cannon galloped to the front and opened fire. Bessieres led forward his cavalry, supported by the guard, but the Austrian batteries answered the cannonade with the fire of more than 300 pieces. The 20 regiments of horse under Bessieres succeeded in breaking the Austrian squares and riding among their cannon, which, however, plowed awful gaps in their ranks. The gallant leader was thrown from the saddle by a cannon ball which struck his steed and hurled him bodily from under his rider. But the grand charge moved on in spite of the cavalry disaster. MacDonald formed his storming column of 18,000 infantry under cover of the cannonade and dashed forward close upon the heels of the cavalry, aiming for the heights of Wagram. The front line in the center comprised 8 battalions, the flanks 13. On the right and left of the infantry flanks rode two mounted divisions, with a division of mounted grenadiers and one of foot guards as a grand reserve. In his pathway lay scores of French guns dismounted by the enemy's fire. His own ranks showed at every step the fresh gaps made by the Austrian shots, but still he pressed on until his corps was wiped out, and the pitiful handful of but 1,500 men clung to their eagles. Meanwhile Massena, on the left, and Davoust, on the right, taking advantage of the confusion in the Austrian lines caused by MacDonald's charge, hurled the enemy's flanks farther and farther from the center. Davoust finally turned to the left and opened his guns upon the heights of Wagram in MacDonald's front.

That ended the battle, and Napoleon sounded a halt, preferring to let well enough alone rather than risk his victory for the sake of cheap glory in capturing flags and guns from a fleeing enemy. The Austrians were beaten, and Napoleon won a long era of peace with the house of Hapsburg as well as its fair daughter, Maria Louisa, for a bride to supplant the Empress Josephine.

In Our Great Grandfather's Time,

big bulky pills were in general use. Like the "blunderbuss" of that decade they were big and clumsy, but ineffective. In this century of enlightenment, we have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver, stomach and bowel derangements in the most effective way.

Assist Nature a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, or dyspepsia, biliousness, pimples, blotches, eruptions, boils, constipation, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequaled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity, with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

A free sample of the "Pellets," (4 to 7 doses) on trial, is mailed to any address, post-paid, on receipt of name and address on postal card.

ONE OF THE BEST.

CATCHER M'GUIRE OF THE WASHINGTON CLUB.

One of the Old Time Players Who Still Remains Among the Stars of the Base Ball Profession—A Varied Career on the Diamond.

JAMES T. M'GUIRE, one of the catchers of the Washington club, of the National league and American association, was born Nov. 18, 1863, at Cleveland, Ohio, and it was on the vacant lots of his native city that he learned to play ball. He played with several local amateur teams, and gained considerable renown. He also played with prominent amateur and semi-professional teams in Ohio and Michigan before accepting his first regular professional engagement with the Terre Haute, Ind., club, in 1883. In 1884 he began the season with the Cleveland club of the National league, but before the season was far advanced he was released. He at once accepted an engagement with the Toledo club of the American association, and was one of the players who was transferred to the Detroit club of the National league at the close of that season. McGuire remained with the Detroit club during the season of 1885, taking part in thirty-four championship contests. During the winter of 1885-86 the Detroit club purchased the "big four" (Brouthers, White, Richardson and Rowe) from the Buffalo club, and then released McGuire, Casey and Wood to the Philadelphia club, so that the former club could have its deal ratified at the annual meeting of the National league. McGuire did good work for the Philadelphia club during the season of 1886, taking part that year in forty-eight championship contests. He remained with the Philadelphias throughout the season of 1887, taking part in forty championship games, and, besides catching well, he stood well up in the official batting averages of the National league. McGuire began the season of 1888 with the Philadelphia club, but was released at an early date because that club then had two first class catchers, Clements and Schriver. Immediately after he was released McGuire returned to his home, and joined the Cleveland club, then of the American association, taking part with the latter club in twenty-five championship games. In 1889 he joined the Toronto club of the International league, taking part that year in ninety-three championship contests, and he ranked well up in the official batting averages of that organization. McGuire was engaged by the Rochester club of the American association for the season of 1890, taking part that year in eighty-seven championship games, and ranking thirteenth in the official batting averages of that association. In 1891 McGuire joined forces with the Washington club of the American association, taking part in one hundred and six championship contests, in eighty-nine of which he filled the catcher's position. When the National league and American association was consolidated, during the winter of 1891-92, at that famous Indianapolis meeting, McGuire was one of the players engaged for the Washington team in the new twelve club league for the season of 1892, and he has since remained with the Washington club. McGuire is steady and reliable catcher, quick and accurate thrower to the bases, and a sure and heavy batsman. McGuire is pretty generally regarded as one of the best catchers for left handed pitchers in the profession.

A POPULAR MANAGER.

D. B. Kehler Remembered by His Employes.

Accidents, Incidents and Personal Mentions Concerning Men and Railway Affairs.

D B Kehler, manager of the Fort Wayne Furniture works, now looks through a handsome pair of gold framed nose spectacles Yesterday morning as Mr Kehler seated himself at his desk he found lying before him the spectacles, attached to which was a note "From the Boys," meaning the employes from the works.

Mr Kehler was surprised. Placing the glasses in position he looked back through the past and discovered that less than a century ago yesterday he made his first appearance on earth, hence the spectacles must be a birthday present. He accepts this theory as the true one and feels very grateful for the kind remembrance.

The Wabash has again fixed up a traffic alliance with the Lake Shore road by which the former line will carry the cattle, hogs and sheep for a stock exporting company from the west to Toledo, where the trains will be turned over to the Lake Shore and taken to the sea board. Visitors are met at the depot by a reception committee and headed by a brass band are marched to the public square where speaking or other entertaining features are provided.

At the regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company at Baltimore yesterday a dividend of 2 per cent. for the six months from January 1st to July 1st, 1894, was declared, payable on and after November 15th. Heavy losses of revenue were incurred by the protracted strike of about six weeks on coal and over two months on coke, resulting in heavy losses, not only on traffic on these articles, but on the industries connected with them. The net earnings during the period named, notwithstanding this, were sufficient for a dividend of 2 per cent, leaving a balance to the credit of profit and loss.

A "CAMP" TRAGEDY.

KILLED HIS FORMER SWEETHEART'S HUSBAND.

A STORY OF FIENDISH JEALOUSY AND LOVE.

Ed Murray a Miner Figures in a Crime With Strange and Unusual Details—Flight and Capture of the Murderer.

JEALOUSY AND illicit love resulted in a horrible crime at Paris, Mo., several days ago, when Ed Murray, a young miner shot and killed "Jap" Houser because of his fatal attachment for Houser's wife The story of the tragedy is one replete with interest. Rose Engle, who married Houser, and who is still but a girl in years, has possessed a fascination over the men in her circle which has driven one to the commission of an unprovoked murder and several others to the melancholy state of mind which follows bitter disappointment. It is simple justice to her to state that her charms were exercised innocently; but their influence was none the less for that She had suitors by the score. She could not be called beautiful, though all her worshipers undoubtedly thought her so. There was that in her manner and the gleam of her great brown eyes which threw a spell around all the young men she met. She could have had her pick of any one of a dozen, and when she finally chose Houser there were many honest fellows who were much cast down.

Among those who courted the charming Rose were two brothers, Ed and John Murray. Both were passionately fond of her and both expected to win her. When she married Houser, John is said to have been quite dejected for awhile, but he became resigned to his fate, and as she could be nothing to him, wisely decided to put her out of his life. But not so with Edward The spell was too strong upon him; he could not give her up altogether even if she was the wife of another He was a friend of Houser before marriage, and though in the first moments of his anger at his failure to win Rose's hand he had vowed vengeance on his successful rival, he latter made up his mind to resume his his friendship with Houser in order that he might have the poor privilege of being occasionally near the woman he loved.

Houser had every confidence in his wife and he made Murray welcome. If the truth were known, he probably reflected what his feelings would have been had he lost the loved one, and a feeling of manly sympathy for the disappointed young miner prompted his cordiality. Murray came to the house often. Mrs. Houser was pleasant to him; no more. Probably she never suspected the depth of Murray's passion; she loved her husband and was happy, and it is not likely that she indulged in much speculation about the feelings of the unhappy man who had loved and lost. On the day of the murder Murray came to the house in apparently good spirits It was Sunday and the three passed the time pleasantly in chatting. Houser and his wife had been indulging in little evidences of affection and finally she, in her impulsive way, went over to him and sat in his lap, putting her arm around his neck.

The pent up passion in Murray was no longer to be controlled The sight maddened him, and drawing his revolver he fired point blank at Houser. Houser fell into the arms of his wife, and in a few moments was dead. Without a word Murray left the house and took to the forest. One purpose alone guided him; to get as far from the scene of his crime as possible.

A terrific storm came up; the display of lightning was one of the most terrible ever seen in that section of the country. But the murderer sought no shelter, he pressed on and on through the darkness By morning he had reached Huntsville, thirty-two miles away. He had not proceeded far into the town, when Sheriff Cameron of Randolph county, who had been notified of the murder, came up to him and put him under arrest He did not appear to be surprised and said nothing. Probably after a night of such terrors as had passed through he was incapable of manifesting surprise at anything He was taken back to the jail at Paris The tragedy has excited great interest in Paris and the surrounding country, and the courtroom was crowded at Murray's hearing.

SAW GOD'S HAND.

And Thenceforward Clay Allison's Life Was a Changed One.

Clay Allison's life, recently ended in the southwest, was a tragic romance. Clay Allison was a desperado, He lived in the Red river country in the panhandle His trigger finger was busiest in the early '80s. His record was twenty-one. He boasted of it. Twenty-one dead men, whose graves were scattered from Dodge City to Santa Fe. The writer saw him kill Bill Chunk, a bad man, who shot people just for the fun of seeing them fall

CLAY ALLISON.

The two men had no cause for quarrel They were the prize killers of the same section of the country It was a spirit of rivalry which made them swear to shoot each other on sight. Their friends bet on the result of their first chance encounter. They met one night at a cross road inn in New Mexico and sat down at tables opposite each other, with their drawn six-shooters resting on their laps beneath their napkins A plate of oysters on the shell had just been set before Chunk, when he dropped his hand, in careless fashion, and sent a ball at Allison beneath the table. Quick as a leap of lightning Allison's replied. A tiny red spot between Chunk's eyes marked where the bullet entered. The dead man rolled over on the table and was still, with his face downward in the dish of oysters. Allison was a large cattle owner He went on a drive to Kansas City once, and while there fell in love, married, and took the woman to his home in the west to live. A child was born to them—a child whose face was as beautiful as the face of cherub, but whose poor little body was horribly deformed. Allison loved the child with the great love of his passionate nature In the babe's misshapen and twisted form his superstitious mind read a meaning as significant as that of the message which the divine hand wrote on the palace walls of the king of old in Babylon God, he thought, had visited a curse upon him for his sins He quit his wild ways. He drank no more. No man ever after the birth of his child fell before his deadly pistol He was completely changed. In the new life which followed he devoted himself with absorbing energy to his business interests He became rich in time. Ten thousand cattle on the Texas ranges bore his brand A short time ago he was driving from his ranch in a heavy road wagon to town. The front wheels jolted down into a deep rut. Allison was pitched headforemost to the ground. His neck was broken. The team jogged on into the distance and left him lying there dead and alone upon the prairie

A MOCK LORD.

Imagines That He Owns the Great Stanford Estate.

A man giving his name as Meton Lader was taken into custody by the police of San Jose, Cal, the other day. He arrived there a few days ago from Oklahoma, having previously sent a telegram from Midland, Kan, to the cashier of the First National bank to pay no money to any one representing to be his attorney As no one by that name had any dealings with the bank, the officials suspected the man was a crank. When he arrived he called at the bank and said he wanted no money paid out until he secured the advice of his attorney The bank agreed to this and notified the police, who began shadowing the man. At Palo Alto he told the people in charge of the Stanford farm that he was the heir to the estate of the late Senator Stanford and directed that special care be observed in the conduct of the farm until he took charge He says he is a prince; that his title is Lord Milton Stanford; that he was stolen when a child, and that ten years ago he learned he was a near relative to Stanford, but only recently decided to make himself known and claim the property. He says he saw Mrs. Stanford on the streets in San Francisco a few days ago and followed her some distance, but she eluded him.

Red Seal BOILER Compound
FOR THE
Removal and Prevention of Scale in Steam Boilers,

The attention of engineers and owners of steam boilers is called to the RED SEAL BOILER COMPOUND It will successfully remove the scale from steam boilers, and also prevent the formation of scale. It is well known that the scale is a powerful non-conductor, and that the waste of fuel is in proportion to the thickness of the scale which becomes attached to the shell, flues, tubes and other parts of the boilers, causing a loss of fuel ranging from one to thirty-seven per cent.

The Red Seal Boiler Compound is entirely free from acids, and does not injure or corrode the iron. In its action it does not vaporize or pass off with the steam. It can be used with perfect safety by Breweries, Dye Houses, Hotels, Refineries, Laundries, and many other establishments too numerous to mention, where pure live steam is required.

It will prevent incrustation and the forming of new scale, without injury to the boiler. The mineral impurities are gradually softened and dissolved, and are then held in suspension until such time as the boiler is blown out under pressure, or washed out when cold.

The compound is in powder form, dissolves easily in warm water, and, as a liquid, can be applied to the boiler through the pump or injector, or in any other convenient way.

All we ask is a trial of RED SEAL BOILER COMPOUND, and we will convince the most skeptical that it is a superior article to many of the so-called boiler compounds on the market.

Directions and price list cheerfully furnished on application.

Attorney Charles H. Worden has written a letter in which he fully explains the recent trouble between Professors Klein and Mangeladorf, of the Zion Lutheran school, and the boys Hullbery and Kuhnert. The facts as given in Mr. Worden's letter would exonerate the teachers and also Mr. Wolf from any blame in the case, which resulted in an action for assault being brought It will be remembered that this suit was dismissed.

The present generation has been rich in old men who have preserved the full measure of their powers until they were beyond the age of four score years. In England we have seen the "Grand Old Man" Gladstone holding firmly the reins of Premier up to the age of 85 and then only resigned because of an affection of his eyes caused by a missile thrown at him by a vandal a few years ago. Germany has given us many examples in the same line In this country, notwithstanding its intense activity, examples have not been wanting of men eminent in statesmanship beyond the age of 80 years. No one who attended the Minneapolis convention will ever forget the stirring address of our Col R W. Thompson before that immense audience of 15,000 people. It was the eighty third anniversary and the convention paused for a few minutes to do honor to the old man. The writer happened to be sitting with a company of citizens of another state, and heard their enthusiastic comments on the character of his address and on his clear, powerful voice, that was plainly audible all over that immense hall Since that time he has done a large share of the work in preparing his "Recollections of Sixteen Presidents," a work that reads as if dictated by a strong man in his prime. The other day, when President Harrison spoke at Terre Haute, it was Col. Thompson's strong voice that introduced him with eloquent words to the great crowd of people who had assembled. Those who have the opportunity of reading Col. Thompson's new book will find it full of evidence, not only of long and varied experience, but of a strong analytic and philosophic mind, that read aright the meaning of that which he saw and heard

A very pleasant affair of last evening was the surprise tendered Mr. E. S. Hurlbut, at his home, 309 West Jefferson street, in honor of his birthday anniversary. The affair was planned by Mrs Hurlbut, and was a complete success. An elaborate supper was served by the hostess at 11 o'clock Games, dancing and other amusements served to wile away the hours. Those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames A. S Coverdale, O. V. Riley, A. W. Line, C A. Grimes, Dr. Brown, A. W. Meteker, J. P. Merrilat, N. Conover, R Brown, Dr Weisell, C. F. The living advertisement party is a novel and laughable amusement for an evening at home. It also makes a feature for a church or charitable entertainment. Unique and well known figures of advertisements form striking tableaux, while some one with talent for the comic recites humorous rhymes to fit the pictures The audience should sit in the dark to give the best effect to the lighted tableaux. For a party at home it makes a jolly idea, and to the person who recognizes the most advertisements impersonated a prize can be given.

Last evening at their home, on West Washington street, Mr and Mrs. A. J. Lung in a very charming manner entertained a number of their friends in honor of their twentieth wedding anniversary. Miss Maud Slagle was the charming hostess at a gathering of her friends last evening at her home, in honor of her ninth birthday anniversary. KILLED HIS OWN CHILD.

Details of a Crime which has Startled New Jersey.

Lawrence R. Hoffman of Hightstown, a village about twelve miles from New Brunswick, N. J., killed his child the other night. The killing was accidental, so far as the child was concerned, although it resulted from an effort on the part of the father to end the life of the child's mother. Hoffman is a well-to-do merchant. He was out drinking and reached home about midnight in frenzied state. His wife reproached reproached him for his condition, and he attacked her. but she beat him off. Then, crazed with anger and liquor, the man rushed into the woodshed, back of the house, and seized an axe. When his wife saw him returning she fled from the room on the first floor, where they had been, and ran upstairs. He followed her, and as he reached the landing he threw the axe at her as she was entering the sleeping room, where she intended to lock herself in with her child. The child was lying in a crib placed against the wall at the side of the room farthest from the door. The edge of the blade ripped open the child's abdomen, causing a wound seven inches long. Hoffman rushed into the room, intent on ending his wife's life, but the woman had abandoned all thought of herself and rushed to the crib. Hoffman reached the side of the crib before he realized what he had done. Then he rushed from the house and summoned a doctor and disappeared. It was then after midnight. Two hours later he reached home again, sobered and remorseful. A constable was waiting for him and locked him up. The physician could do nothing for the little one that availed and it died.

Prisoner, Convicted in a Rich and Mortgaged to Twenty Years in Prison, Saved for His Legal Punishment.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Ohio, Oct. 17.—William Dolby, colored, who a week ago criminally assaulted Mrs. Mary G. Boyd aged fifty five, at Farrel's station, near here, and was captured at Delaware, Ohio, was brought into court yesterday afternoon. He plead guilty and was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary.

An angry mob gathered about the jail after Dolby had been identified by his victim and Sheriff Cook called to his assistance the local militia company. This action increased the fury against Dolby and Governor McKinley was appealed to for additional assistance and troops from Columbus were sent here, Colonel Colt in command.

The mob surrounded the jail and court house, attempted to take Dolby from the officers, when removed from jail to the court house for trial but was kept at bay by the free use of bayonets and clubbed with guns. No one was seriously hurt.

The mob was kept at bay until 6 p. m., when it made an attack. The militia repulsed them without firing, but at 8:45 p. m. the south door was forced. This door opens upon the street, which was filled with men, women and children. The guards fired on the attacking party but none of the latter were hurt, but a dozen persons in the street were struck, two killed outright and four fatally injured. The killed are:

James Judy, aged twenty-five,
Smith Welch, aged nineteen.

The wounded:

Hugh Ammerman, shot through hip; dangerous.
Emert Ellis, thumb shot off.
Mark Johnson, of Williamsburg, Clermont county, shot through bowels; will die.
George Keating, fourteen years old, shot through leg and groin.
John Korn, shot in foot.
John McCune, shot in leg.
F. L. Nitterhouse, shot through both ankles, one foot almost severed.
Rial Parrott, shot in foot.
William Sams, fatally shot through the bowels.
Frank Smith, flesh wound in face.

All night an angry crowd surrounded the jail and muttered threats, but there was no actual violence, after the guards had fired on the attacking party.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 18.—Jasper Dolby, the negro sentenced at Washington C. H., to twenty years imprisonment for a criminal assault on a most estimable white woman, an old lady, was landed in the penitentiary at 7 o'clock this morning. He was escorted here by Sheriff Cook and Deputy Busick, accompanied on the train by the Columbus companies of the Ohio National guard. The prisoner was taken from the train at Dennison avenue, not coming into the Union station and walked to the prison, one wall of which is on the avenue. The military remained in the cars and were carried to the Union station. All troops have left Washington C. H.

A Columbus Dispatch reporter, who came up with the train, states that after midnight things at the Court House quieted down very much. The citizens had nearly all gone home. Yet many persons stood on the neighboring corners until a much later hour discussing the affairs, as may be readily imagined in connection with such a terrible sensation as the killing of two men and the wounding of eleven others by the military. Some of these people who remained about the court house were supposed to be in a plot to blow up the building with dynamite. There had been so much talk about a possible occurrence of that kind, based upon what seemed to be reliable evidence, that the vigilance of the guard was not relaxed in the least.

The military, all told, until 3:30 a. m., numbered less than 100 men. Against the surging hundreds of men who crowded Lafayette about the court house, this small band had kept up a determined front for twelve or fifteen hours. Finally, when the First regiment from Cincinnati and the two companies from the Fourteenth at Columbus arrived at about 3:30 a. m., a separate force was formed by the men of the Fourteenth, and escorted by the First, the line of march for the cars was taken up, the negro being in the square. He had been in the court house about twelve hours, the officers not daring to attempt to return him to jail, after the sentence had been passed. En route to the cars in the early morning nothing of interest occurred, except that a good many people were still on the streets. Beyond an occasional voice in the stillness of the hour, uttering threats and disapproval, the affair closed in a rather weird way.

Just before the troops left the death of C. W. Johnson, or "Mac" Johnson, as the reporter called him, was announced, making three dead. He was shot in the stomach and lived at Kyles, Butler county, Ohio.

The old man, Frank Niedhauser, aged seventy, shot in the leg and suffering amputation, cannot survive. He was the only prominent citizen injured. The other injured men, it would seem, belonged in a class who would be likely to get into a place of this kind. Theodore Ammerman, aged twenty-two, at last accounts is still in a critical condition.

The reinforcements called for by Sheriff Cook at 4 p. m., yesterday, not arriving until 3:30 this morning, and the shooting of the citizens having occurred about 7 p. m., has not on foot an investigation to ascertain whether the cause of delay in arrival of the reinforcements was due to the railroad company or the military department.

It is proper to state that the soldiers had to be gathered from their respective vocations or homes. The Columbus companies were held here to wait for a Marysville company and left at 11 p. m. It is thirty-nine miles to Washington C. H. The train stopped at Mt Sterling, twenty-three miles from here, to pick up a company.

The Cincinnati troops, according to the statement of a railroad man, were to arrive at Washington C. H. by the same line but from the opposite direction, and were to be timed so as to arrive simultaneously with the troops from Columbus.

Inquiry alone can determine the cause of delay in arrival. The criticism is that a greater promptness on the part of somebody might have saved the loss of life.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 18.—Gov. McKinley, being asked about the affair as to what he desired to say, said:

"The act speaks for itself. Troops were sent to act in aid of the civil authorities, who were powerless to quell a mob that was seeking to overthrow the law and its orderly administration."

The governor was up all night in a sleeping car and in direct communication until 3:30 a. m. with his adjutant general and came through Washington C. H. about 6 a. m., having left Cincinnati at 3:30 a. m., the car having stood in the Cincinnati station until time for the departure of the train. The governor says he will not leave Ohio so long as there is possibility of trouble. He has formally withdrawn the troops. He has received a number of telegrams to the effect that his "stand for law and its proper enforcement will be heartily approved of by all wise lovers of state and country." He has canceled speaking engagements at Louisville and Nashville and the meeting at New Orleans will depend upon the developments of today. The feeling here is that the governor would be justified in going to New Orleans, but he says: "It is better to stay here a little too long than to go a little too soon."

The prisoner stated to the penitentiary officials that he was not guilty, but had entered a plea of guilty because he had been informed that he was to be mobbed and that this was the only way to escape with his life. He claimed never to have been arrested or charged with the slightest infraction of law. Dr. Irvin, in making the physical examination, said Dolby's legs trembled and his heart fluttered as a result of his scare. The fact in this case is that he was clearly identified by his victim.

MACCABEES TORN UP.

Recorder Houghton's Failure to Qualify Is Causing Trouble.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 18.—Great Commander N. S. Boynton, of the Michigan Maccabees, has appointed Thomas Watson, of Roscommon, now lieutenant commander, to succeed Joseph Houghton, who failed to qualify as great record keeper. Henry W. Carey, of Manistee, now chaplain, is made lieutenant commander, and the office of chaplain he has offered to Oscar Allyn, of this city, but Allyn declines with thanks. After a hot fight at the annual convention in September Houghton was elected record keeper in place of Royston, who has held it fifteen years, and Boynton was elected commander. The Maccabees constitution calls for $25,000 bond with three parties for the record keeper, and Houghton was vouched for by two western indemnity companies. Boynton declared this insufficient, and the time expiring yesterday, he declared the office vacant. Houghton's friends will not give up without a fight, and the organization will be torn by the discussion.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield Are Again United.

Each Thought the Other Dead and Did Not Discover the Mistake in a Score of Years.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Edward Sheffield, of Melbourne, Australia, and Ellen, his wife, of Helena, Mont., met in the law office of Richard V. Reed, No. 18 Wall street, last night, for the first time in twenty years. Each had believed the other dead, but each had remained faithful. The man had become moderately rich, but he never married, though he heard his wife was dead. While going through his safe deposit some months ago Sheffield found memoranda concerning five hundred acres of land in Montana, which he had bought for a song twenty-five years ago from a land agency and had forgotten. He wrote to Oliver Pritchard, a London lawyer, to look the matter up and see if the land was worth anything. Pritchard wrote to Lawyer Boyd, of this city, and he communicated with a lawyer in Helena, which was near the lands in question. The reply was that a Mrs. Sheffield had shown deeds for the lands and sold most of the acres at a high price as silver had been found in several places. Mrs. Sheffield was a widow, the Helena lawyer reported, and was living at Helena. The rest came about quite naturally. Mrs. Sheffield was communicated with. She wrote that she had waited for years at home until perfectly satisfied that her husband was dead. News of the shipwreck had reached Southampton. Then she took the deeds for the Montana lands and came to America to see what she could sell them for. She was amazed to find herself rich. As for the story that she had run off with another man, that was a whole cloth fabrication of Porter's. She had been faithful to her husband's memory.

Husband and wife, so long parted, hastened to unite their lives once more. It was decided to settle in Montana, so Sheffield sold his Australian ranch and crossed the water, and Mrs. Sheffield came east to meet him. The first interview, in Mr. Boyd's Wall street office, was a very brief one. They started west at once.

MAYOR DENNY PROMPT.

Orders His Policemen to Enforce the Indianapolis Liquor Law.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—The developments resulting from the visit of officers of the United Citizens' league to the saloons on Sunday, nine out of ten of which were found to be defying the law, have created a sensation here and Mayor Denny has addressed a letter to the police board demanding that the effort to enforce the law shall be more pronounced and the police held to the strictest accountability for violations occurring in their respective districts. The mayor requests the board, in view of the developments of last Sunday, to appoint and swear in as many extra men as the superintendent may think necessary to detect violations, and says that if the appropriations for the force of men large enough to meet the extra expense he will ask the council for more money. He emphasizes his opposition to the saloons when they assume the attitude of lawbreakers and says they must be closed and kept closed.

DEED OF DEMONS.

Place Dynamite on the Tracks to Blow Up a Train.

They Get the Explosive on the Wrong Track and Wreck an Accommodation Instead of Express.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 18.—What is believed to have been a desperate attempt at train robbery was made last night near this city on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. At eight o'clock an east bound accommodation train ran over a dynamite cartridge, near Bluehill, at a very lonely spot about fifteen miles from Pittsburg. The flange of one wheel was blown off but one end of a coach wrecked. As the train had nearly reached the end of its trip there were few passengers aboard and no one was injured. An examination of the track was made and two more powerful dynamite cartridges were found on the rails. Had the train been running fast it would have exploded all three cartridges and have been totally wrecked. It is pretty well known that the intention was to wreck the mail and express, a through train from the east, due a few minutes later, but the robbers made a mistake and placed the cartridges on the east-bound track instead of the west-bound. Arrests are expected today.

THE BOILER EXPLODED.

Sending Scalding Water Over the Bossnik Family.

And Bring to the Attention of the Police Hitherto Blind Officers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The boiler of an illicit still, in a tenement house on Clinton street, exploded this morning, severely scalding Pauline and Jennie Bossnik, mother and child, respectively aged thirty years and fourteen months, and John Jobesky, twenty-two years old. The woman's husband, Hermann, supposed to be the owner and operator of the still, ran away after the explosion, leaving his wife and child crying for help. The boiler was made of sheet iron and was fire by three feet in dimension. A dozen barrels of mash were in the room. Excuse officers have taken charge of the still and the finished and unfinished liquor on hand. The still is only about a block from a police station.

STRAUS MAY DECLINE TO RUN.

Dispute About the State Ticket Has Led to a Crisis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The crisis has been reached in the mayoralty fight in this city, which may end in Nathan Straus' refusal to head the Tammany ticket. Many of the leaders of Tammany hall are opposed to Senator Hill permitting his name to be placed at the head of the state democratic ticket, which is also the republican county ticket, and is headed by Colonel Strang for mayor. It was said that some of Nathan Straus' closest personal and political friends were also opposed to this. The argument is made that voters who will go to the polls to ballot for the straight democratic ticket may be fooled into voting the entire ticket. They might see a ballot headed by David B. Hill for governor and perhaps vote it without discovering that it was a state democratic ballot with William L. Strong for mayor and the other anti-Tammany hall candidates printed upon it. Senator Hill is in favor of permitting this, and a controversy has arisen between him and Mr. Straus on this subject. Conferences of Tammany leaders were held yesterday to consider this phase of the campaign and unless the matter is settled so that no injury will result to Tammany Mr. Straus will refuse to run for mayor. He is withholding his letter of acceptance to await a final decision of the question.

SWINDLED KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Postoffice Authorities Working on a Big Case of Fraud.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—The postoffice inspectors are working on frauds perpetrated upon Knights of Pythias lodges all over the country. The inspectors are reticent because their work is not completed, and the knights will not talk except to say that the fraud was probably committed by a member of the order and their officials turned the case over to the postal inspectors. Dogus sick benefit order have been presented to lodges all over the country and cashed, securing $20 from each lodge. All signs and grips are said to be used by the swindler and blank orders were stolen from different lodges. At Logansport, Ind., 1,000 blank orders and the seal were stolen from Apollo to tge room. These blanks, duly filled out, were cashed at Bellow Falls, Me., Rutland, Vt., and other eastern points.

The sojourners have settled the fees on the recent Hoedlinger fire. The first got $12,000 in cash, the insurance men taking the salvage and allowing the firm $6,500 therefor. It was one of the quickest and most satisfactorily adjusted losses ever settled in this city.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Fenech will take place from Rev. Franke's Lutheran church, five miles out from the city, tomorrow. Through a misunderstanding the funeral was announced in the city papers to take place this morning.

Mr. J. W. Forbes and daughter Maud are in the city visiting friends.

THE CZAR WORSE.

No Wrak That He Cannot Bear a Journey.

And the Proposed Removal From Yalta to the South Coast of the Crimea Has Been Abandoned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 18.—It is announced here that the condition of the czar has perceptibly changed for the worse. It is added that his symptoms of general debility and weakness of the heart are more pronounced.

The Grand Duke Sergius and Paul brothers of the czar, started for Livadia today. An official dispatch indicating the sudden gravity of the czar's condition was sent to Darmstadt yesterday, and a reply was received today saying that the grand duke of Hesse Darmstadt and the grand duchess Sergius, Princess Alix, had started for St. Petersburg. The news from Livadia has caused consternation in St. Petersburg, and there is a general feeling that the end may be expected at any day. Consequently great anxiety is experienced regarding the consequences of the czar's sudden demise.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The reports in circulation regarding the czar's health, that his condition has changed for the worse and that he may not be able to leave Yalta for Corfu, have caused a sensation here and probably in view of the previous reports which have led people to believe that he was in no immediate danger. It is now considered that there is no little doubt that a decided turn for the worse has taken place and that the czar may be in a more dangerous state than the most alarming reports have hitherto stated.

The anxiety regarding the health of the Czar was increased today by the receipt of a despatch from St Petersburg distinctly announcing that the condition of the Czar has perceptibly changed for the worse, and people are trying to read between the lines of the official bulletin published by the official messenger, of St Petersburg, on Tuesday last, many interpreting the announcement on that day to mean that the Czar is unable to bear the journey to Corfu.

The official messenger, as already cabled on Tuesday last, in a special edition, published the following bulletin, which was signed by Professors Leyden, Zacharine, Popoff and Beljaminoff, the physicians in attendance on the Czar:

"After consultation, we find that the disease of the kidneys shows no improvement. His majesty's strength has diminished, but the physicians in attendance hope that the climate of the south coast of the Crimea will have a beneficial effect upon the health of the czar."

It will readily be seen that an unfavorable interpretation can easily be made of the above bulletin and that it is not astonishing that it has given rise to additional reports of an alarming nature in spite of the fact that every precaution has been made to receive his majesty at Corfu.

INTERESTING STORY

Brought Out by a Row Suit Begun at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—A suit with an interesting story behind it has been filed in this city by Mrs. Elizabeth S. Moxley against Elizabeth W. H. Dee, sometimes called Elizabeth J. Moxley, for the possession of property valued at $30,000. Located on fine residence streets in this city. The plaintiff, who is sixty seven years old, is a resident of Baltimore. She has deposed that in 1849 she was married to John Smith Moxley in Baltimore. Three weeks after the marriage her husband left for California to seek his fortune in the gold mines. She wrote him, as directed, to various towns in the state, but received no reply. Three years later Moxley returned to Baltimore, but not to see his wife. The latter met him on the street and conversed with her husband, who gave no satisfactory explanation of his desertion, refusing to return with his wife. He again came to California, and although he made several trips to the east, Mrs. Moxley never saw him afterwards. Mrs. Moxley supported herself by her needle also acting as governess and housekeeper. From Moxley's brother in California, Mrs. Moxley learned that her husband was living with another woman but no suit for divorce was brought by either party. Mr. Moxley died here two years ago and the woman whom he introduced here as his wife took possession of all his property, part of which had previously been deeded to her. This Mrs. Moxley claims as community property. Her story is corroborated by the depositions of her mother and of Moxley's relatives in Baltimore, all of whom reside with the deceased wife.

POPULISTS ARE TOO LATE

Out of Their Judicial Candidates Omitted From the State Ballot.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—The state printer began the printing of the ballots for the November election yesterday, and soon after the process started the secretary of the populist committee appeared and wanted to file the name of the candidate for judge of the supreme court for the First district. The time for filing the certificates of nomination ended Tuesday and the state officers refused to accept the name of the nominee and it will not be on the state ticket.

Secretary Comstock says that Tuesday was not the last day for filing, as contended by the state officers, and that he will mandate the law to have the ballots destroyed and others printed containing the name of the candidate selected by the committee. The law declares that the certificate shall not be filed more than sixty days and less than twenty days before the election, and the populists claim that yesterday, and not Tuesday, was the last day. When the certificate was offered yesterday several hundred thousand ballots had already been printed.

THE COURTS.

Sarah Miller Is Again Adjudged Insane.

The Youngker Divorce Suit—Prisoners Escapes From the Court Room—Court Cases.

Justices Wilkinson and Ryan, with Doctors Metzger and Miller, acting as a commission in lunacy, have adjudged Sarah Miller, of this city, to be insane and she will be sent to an asylum. The woman talks incoherently and is violent. One of her insane ideas is that she must preach in a certain church in the country next Sunday. She is sixty five years of age and has twice before been at an insane asylum.

WANTS A DIVORCE.

Hannah Youngker has brought suit in the superior court for a divorce from Charles Youngker. B. F. Harper is the attorney for the plaintiff.

PRISONER ESCAPES.

Charles Vanderford, a prisoner under arrest and having his preliminary hearing before Justice Ryan, made a bold and daring dash for liberty yesterday afternoon and is now at large.

Vanderford is a carpenter, living at 170 West Main street, and was arrested on a charge of illegitimate parentage, preferred by Rosa Dutson, a young woman living on Buchanan street. While he was waiting for his preliminary hearing in the Justice's office, he went into the back room and jumped from the second story window, thus making his escape.

BURGLAR ROUNDED UP.

Sam Jones, charged with housebreaking, was bound over to court by Justice Ryan on the charge of burglary, and in default of bail was sent to jail. Yesterday Jones removed a window from the residence of Jasper Knight, near Dunfee, and was helping himself to the things of the household when Constable Tenman, of that township, happened along and arrested him.

Suit has been filed in the superior court by Sylvanus Bowers against Lida Wetherly and others, to quiet a title to real estate. Vesey & Heaton are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

JUDGE O'ROURKE'S VACATION.

The fact that Judge John Morris has been called in by the attorneys to sit on the bench during the trial of the Carier will case in the circuit court gives Judge Edward O'Rourke a deserved and needed vacation of several days, although considerable of his time is taken up while this case is on trial in attending to other court matters which come up for consideration. Judge O'Rourke's court transacts a large amount of legal business and as a consequence he is kept pretty closely confined during the greatest part of the year. His vacation just now gives him an opportunity to make some political speeches throughout the county, and this he is doing. Last night he spoke in Lake township and had a large audience. The judge handles the political questions of the day in an able manner and is a practical and interesting talker. In his years of experience as judge of the circuit court he has proven his eminent fitness for the position which he now holds and for which he is a candidate for re-election, and the people of Allen county will make no mistake by continuing him in office.

RUSSIAN UPHEAVAL.

The Czar's Death Will Be the Signal for Revolt.

The Student Party, the Army and the Clergy Hopelessly Rabbled With a Conspiracy.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—Dr. George von Schrenk, the German traveler, who claims to have fixed his address by mail as to the situation in Russia, said today that he had just received another cryptographic letter indirectly from St. Petersburg which indicated an upheaval when the Czar dies. The student party, the army and the clergy are honeycombed with a conspiracy to set aside the Czarovitz and place Prince George on the throne in spite of the czar's personal wishes. The czar is cursed with fear, and does not employ Russian physicians for fear they are connected with the conspiracy.

COLORED BICYCLIST.

He Crosses the Continent and Blocks the Roads.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—A colored bicycle rider has crossed the continent from New York to San Francisco on his wheel and blocked several hundred years of tools on the way. The wheelman who made the long journey is Boyd Gray, a bootblack whose home is in Yonckers, N. Y. He set out five months ago, and while riding travelled forty miles a day. Wherever he stopped he blacked boots and thus earned enough money to pay his traveling expenses. He had few mishaps on the way and will return as he came.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

Three Cases Disposed of By Judge Hez Wilkinson Today.

A Drunken Farmer Attempts to Clean Out the Neighborhood Southward and at This City.

Justice Wilkinson presided at police court this morning in the absence of Mayor Oakley.

Two prisoners were up for trial, Louis Gibson and C. A. Stanley, both drunks. Gibson was let over and Stanley was let go. James King, a plain drunk, paid his fine last night and was let go.

Officer Jesse Patton has been transferred to Nelson and officer Foulks has been given the Calhoun street beat north to Bluffington.

CRAZY DRUNK.

George Billman, a farmer, who lives on the Pluthun road beyond the county farm, was in the city yesterday and went home last evening very drunk. Billman lives with his brother in law, Emmett Blakely, and when he reached the house last night began by hacking double-bladed axes at the head of his relatives. This playful sport was followed by a hand to hand conflict in which Blakely was cut on the head with a sharp dirk knife. Blakely pulled his gun and sent slugs of lead shot at the drunken man, who appeared to catch the bullets in his teeth and then spit them out at his adversary. By this time the earth was slippery with gore and Billman, leaving Blakley for dead, ran to the home of a cripple named McLaren and beat him within an inch of his life. He then went to the farm house of Charles Fairfield, asked for a blanket and permission to sleep in the barn. This he obtained, and going into the haymow, soon fell asleep. Deputy Sheriffs Harrod and Meiching were by this time hot on the trail, and going to the barn dug Billman out from under the hay, brought him to town and lodged him in jail. Billman is a tough looking fellow of about thirty-five years of age. Blakley is not badly hurt.

Billman had his hearing this afternoon before Justice Ryan and was bound over in the sum of $1,000 for assault with intent to kill. Failing to give bond he went to jail.

POTATOES STOLEN.

Last night two thieves made quite a haul on the farm of Henry McFadden, eleven miles west of this city. They drove into his potato patch a conveyance holding twenty-five bushels of fine tubers. Their rig was tracked towards this city.

AFTER BURGLARS.

Sheriff Clausmeier this afternoon went to Columbia City to look after two men who stole jewelry and cash from Mrs. Kieger's boarding house, No. 161 Harrison street, a day or so ago.

Sheriff Clausmeier returned last evening from near Leo bringing with him the horse and buggy which early in the week had been stolen from in front of the police station. Sheriff Clausmeier and his deputies had a hard trip after the thief. The chase Tuesday night and yesterday morning was a hot one, but the officer was rewarded. Near Spencerville the thief drove his outfit into a corn field, and without waiting to unhitch the horse turned him loose and fled to the woods. The officers followed closely but were unable to locate the fugitive and securing the rig drove back to this city. Sheriff Clausmeier has been particularly fortunate in this line of work and out of all the horses stolen during his term of office only one was not recovered and in this case the thief had forty-eight hours start.

IT IS CRIMINAL.

Hundreds of Children Exposed to Contagious Disease.

The Board of Health Will Do What They Say) Begin to Prosecute Careless Physicians.

Just as soon as City Attorney Nirdlinger returns to Fort Wayne the board of health will (so they say) begin some prosecutions with a view of preventing, if possible, the spread of contagious diseases. These prosecutions will not be confined to any class of citizens, but whoever is criminally careless and jeopardizes the health of the community will be made to feel the strong arm of the law. This applies particularly to those physicians who have refused to report contagious diseases to the board. There have been a great many more of these gentlemen than people would naturally imagine. The only excuse which they can possibly offer for this negligence is that it hurts their practice to antagonize their patrons, possibly they also believe it is money in their pockets to aid in the spread of the contagions, but THE SENTINEL is loth to believe any Fort Wayne physician guilty of this.

Dozens of cases are cited by the board of health of physicians absolutely refusing to report to them, but one of the most flagrant is that at No. 19 Gay street. Some days ago a child was taken ill in the family living at this place. The disease was said by the attending physician to be acrely croup and this is not paid much attention to by the board, as it is not generally a dangerous disease. After a few days illness the child died. Upon the undertaker's report the physician returned the cause of death as membranous croup. The funeral, however, was not private, but was attended by a large number of friends of the afflicted family, thus endangering the lives of hundreds of helpless little children at the time of this funeral another child in the family was ill with sore throat, and this morning it also died.

Not until Monday was a card placed on the residence as a warning and this would possibly never have been done had not one member of the board of health made a personal investigation of the case. Both children died with malignant cases of throat trouble, which is just as contagious under the name of membranous croup as diphtheria.

There is only one of many cases. If diphtheria is so prevalent now, what will it be in the winter and spring? The board of health has wisely determined to make an example of someone and the people will uphold them. There is no time like the present!

HELD FOR MURDER.

Fort Wayne Medical Student Indicted.

Said to Have Murdered a Relative at Athens, Mich.

A. D. Swortz, Who Was in the A. M. Recorder's Office for Two Years, Charged With the Crime.

A. D. Swortz, a student for two terms of the Fort Wayne College of Medicine, has been indicted by the grand jury at Athens, Mich., for the murder of his brother-in-law, Johnson, whom, it is alleged, he shot and threw the body into the river. Swortz left this city last spring at the close of the college term and has since been practicing medicine at Athens. While in this city his conduct was good and he stood high in the esteem of the faculty and his fellow students.

Johnson married Swortz's sister and it is said that this caused more very ill feeling between the two men.

From Dr. A. J. Reder some particulars as to Swortz were learned. The indicted man was in the doctor's office all the time during the period of his studies at the medical college. During the summer months he was engaged in peddling books. He only took special branches at the college and did not take a general course.

Swortz was quite well known here and was often seen about Butterfordon's drug store where he usually loafed.

Swortz was a peculiar sort of a fellow and not inclined to be communicative. He claimed to be sixty-one years of age but in reality was only about thirty-one or thirty-two. He left this city the 25th of last March expecting to return here this fall but did not show up.

The murder was particularly atrocious and what the outcome of the grand jury's investigation will be is only conjectured.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The Medical Fraternity Pay a Tribute to the Memory of Dr. Brooks.

At a meeting of the Allen County Medical society, in special session, Dr. W. P. Wheary and I. N. Rosenthal were appointed a committee to draft a set of resolutions relative to the demise of Dr. W. H. Brooks, who was a member of the society continuously, from the date of its organization to the time of his death.

The following resolutions were reported by the committee at a regular meeting of the society held Tuesday evening, Oct. 15:

WHEREAS, Our venerable friend and fellow-member, Dr. William H. Brooks, has closed his long and useful earthly career with the love and respect of those who associated with him, and the gratitude of those who profited by his professional skill; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Allen County Medical society, that in the decease of one who may truly be termed the father of the medical profession of this city, and a life-long member of this society, we feel that we have lost a genial and kindly friend and a highly honored fellow practitioner, to whose memory the mournful tribute of our high regard is most sincerely given;

Resolved, That this society tender to the bereaved friends of Dr. Brooks its cordial sympathy in their hour of sorrow.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the society and that a copy of them be transmitted to the relatives of our late venerable member.

Malarial Poison

Results from atmospheric conditions, and can therefore be checked only by a sure and reliable preventive. S. S. S. is the remedy. A great many persons have been cured by it of Malaria, Chills and Fever, etc. It removes the poison from the system, and thus restores health.

Mr. I. A. Rice, Ottawa, Kan., writes: "For three years I was troubled with Malaria, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was so reduced in flesh that I lost all strength. I tried several physicians and patent medicines, but could get no relief. I then decided to try that wonderful S.S.S. A few bottles of this medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever."

It is estimated that European countries will have to import 115,000,000 bushels of wheat, owing to the shortage in the crop.

GOVERNOR MCKINLEY has been invited by the republican state committee of Louisiana to abandon the duties of his office in Ohio long enough to swing around the circle in the Pelican state, and he has decided that it will be a proper thing to do.

MR. SELLS, United States district attorney of one of the Iowa districts, has received notice from the department of justice that it is against the rules of the department for district attorneys to actively participate in campaign work. In accordance therewith he has cancelled his appointments.

A CABLEGRAM has been received at the state department from United States Minister Denby, at Pekin, which is calculated to reassure persons who have friends in China and who have been fearful as to their safety. The minister says that the reports of danger to the foreign residents of Pekin are exaggerated. There has been only one instance of an attack on Americans and adequate punishment was meted out at once to the perpetrators. A proclamation has been issued by the authorities enjoining protection for foreigners.

SOME of our city papers are throwing stones at the vehicle ordinance. They can't hit it too hard for us. We believe that when a person pays taxes once on a horse and buggy he ought to be allowed to use the same without any further burdens being imposed on him. While this matter is up for debate we would like to have the ear of the city council for one moment. When you passed this ordinance, following in the footsteps of Indianapolis, why did you fail to add the one great revenue raiser that Indianapolis adopted? That city receives one thousand dollars every year from every brewer that uses the streets. In our city they pay no more than do the owners of other vehicles and yet they have their heavily loaded wagons on the streets nearly all of the time. If Indianapolis was good enough to follow in one case why not in the other? Indianapolis receives many thousand of dollars from this revenue and Fort Wayne, with its outside and inside firms doing business here, could receive as much. We understand that it was sandwiched along with the high license ordinance, and may never be resurrected.

A Sober Statement.

President George B. Roberts, of the Pennsylvania railroad company, one of the most conservative of the representative men who stand for and powerfully influence the great railroad interests of the United States, has given to the public his views on the economic outlook in this country in an interview published at Philadelphia. Mr. Roberts is successfully directing the largest railroad corporation in the world. Its revenues are more than double the entire revenues of this government a generation ago, and it is the one great artery that reaches into every section of the land and feels every pulsation of commerce, industry and trade. He is not a politician. How he votes, or whether he votes at all, in political contests, but few, if any, know, but he does bring to his exceptionally responsible trust the highest measure of experience, skill and fidelity, as is abundantly shown by the fact that the stock of his company has gone through the convulsions of last year with only the slightest variation in its value on the market. Regarding the recent panic and the business outlook, Mr. Roberts says:

"The recent panic, which began in 1893, and the natural result, an industrial depression, which still continues, was largely the natural outgrowth of speculation in all kinds of securities representing no real value. A large mass of railroad securities and of 'industrials' equally worthless had been put upon the market, and the financial panic was the legitimate result of the discovery of their worthlessness. It was at first a bankers' panic, rather than a commercial or industrial one. Its first fruits were a paralysis of our industries, from which the manufacturers of the country are now slowly recovering. I do not believe that there will be a speedy or radical rebound from that depression, but I do look for a gradual and general improvement, which will be evidenced by an active demand for paying investments on the part of capitalists. During the depression the money capital of the country has been almost valueless, inasmuch as it brought its possessors practically no returns. It will now, I think, be drawn into active uses, and will stimulate enterprise in many directions, so that we may look for greater activity in all branches of trade and manufacture. So far as my observation goes there is already a general return throughout the country to manufacturing activity, the manufacturers of iron are more active now than for a year past."

Mr. Roberts does not speak to affect political campaigns. He speaks solely for the great industrial interests of the country on which his vast railway system depends for its prosperity, and he necessarily studies the causes of panics which make capital halt and give idleness to labor. He tells the exact truth as taught him by the increased business of his great corporation, when he says that he looks for "a gradual and general improvement which will be evidenced by an active demand for paying investments on the part of capital." He is right also in saying that there will not be "a speedy or radical rebound from the depression." Such rebounds are never healthy nor are they enduring, but with the evidence of improvement on every hand starting in the very fountain of our business channels, it is certain to be as permanent as it is steady. Every point gained in commercial and industrial progress will be maintained, and now, with the setting of every sun, the general condition of the country is better than it was but one day before. On this point Mr. Roberts could not err, for it is only when industry is employed and industrial products demand transportation, that improvement in the great transportation companies of the country can be felt.

The Straightest Tip.

It is the quarter a night that you give the sleeping car porter. The reason it is so straight is that you are putting money straight into the pocket of the sleeping car company. Two dollars a night is not enough tax for these impecunious companies. They must live somehow, and so they levy on the passengers in their cars to get their little spending money. The wages said to be frequently paid to the sleeping car porter is $15 a month and find himself. It is about the average pay that a good kitchen girl gets, with her food and lodging thrown in.

Yet in spite of getting $15 a month from the car company the pay of the colored porter runs often away ahead that of the white conductor of the train. The colored porter wears diamonds and takes his best girl outings to fashionable seaside resorts and orders soft shell crabs and champagne.

The car companies cut down the porter's wages to almost nothing, calculating to the last 25 cents the amount of the tips the porter will levy on the helpless traveler. So the companies get out of paying decent wages, so the traveler is utterly at the mercy of the porter, who can be as mean as he chooses to those who cannot pay.

It is the same in the great hotels that charge $7 a day. They pay the table waiters a trifle, but the table waiters manage to get the rest of the traveler's pile. The consequence of all this is that greedy vulgarians with money and with no foolish scruples about other people's rights or convenience get all the best food and the best places at the table. The greedy vulgarians have not yet outgrown the propensities of some of their ancestors with bristles.

Relic Hunting Idiots.

The sculptured face of George Washington in the inside of the great Washington monument back of the White House by the Potomac river has no nose. The nose was chipped off by a relic hunter. That there is a human being alive and walking among white men who is capable of such an atrocity shows how far the world is yet from civilization. What good would the poor mutilated stone nose do the vandal who cut it off? He would scarcely dare show it among his rare art treasures. There certainly is no beauty left in it now, whatever there was originally.

Your relic hunter is in every case such a fool that he has no distinction in himself at all. When he visits the graves of great men or the monuments of antiquity, he thinks it will confer a little borrowed grace on him, to have rubbed against the historic places. The American relic hunting idiot will even punch holes with his umbrella point in the priceless mosaic pavements of Italy just so that he may gratify his back country mania for showing off that he has traveled.

Never chip a monument or historic stone. Never snip a tapestry or break a twig from a forbidden locality. Carry the memory of noted objects you have seen in your heart and brain and make a good story telling how you have seen them. Thus the world will know you have been away from home. Remember one of the worst bores in Christendom is the person who has gathered up a lot of sticks and stones and old trash from historic localities and insists on displaying it to your weary eyes.

The more moderate of the French people say they will forgive Germany and take her to their heart again if she will cede back to France Lorraine. She may keep Alsace, they say, for Alsace is more distinctively German in her population than French. If William and his government would do this, then he might even go in peace to Paris to attend the World's fair in 1900, as he has threatened to do. But to give Lorraine back to France is just what Germany will never do—at least hardly ever.

OVERWORK KILLS.

How Few Persons Stop to Think of It.

And How Few Who Are Not Overworking in Some Way.

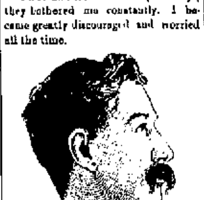

Does This Mean You, Reader? Are You Not Doing More Than You Ought?

Oh, the millions of tired out, hard-working men and women! Our stores, shops, factories and homes, all have them. They are weakening their systems, ruining their nerves, and laying a foundation for early decay and death! That nervous, weak, and tired feeling at night is a warning of what is coming.

If you feel this way, look out! You will break down just as surely as you don't do something to get strong. Read the terrible experience of D. D. Bulkley, Esq., one of the most popular men of Morstown, Vt.

"Within the last year I have found myself in a fearfully debilitated and depressed condition from overwork. I was in such a terrible state I could not sleep nights, and was so weak and nervous that the least exertion would completely unnerve me.

"I also had trouble with my kidneys, they bothered me constantly. I became greatly discouraged and worried all the time.

MR. D. D. BULKLEY.

I consulted many physicians, but they did me no good. I also took all kinds of medicines, but without benefit.

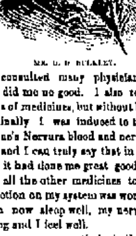

"Finally I was induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I can truly say that in a short time it had done me great good, more than all the other medicines together. Its action on my system was wonderful. I can now sleep well, my nerves are strong and I feel well.

"I owe my cure entirely to that most wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I recommend every sick and suffering person to use it. I know it will cure them."

As a great physician once said, "If these poor sufferers would only be induced to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy they would soon be well and strong." Some people are hard to be convinced, but even the most unbelieving now realize that this wonderful medicine cures.

And it is because it cures that everybody uses it. Try it. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and its discoverer is that well known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14 h Street, New York City. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Would Be More Careful.

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm, and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh. I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrhal smell all left him. He appears as well as any one.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

THE GRAND CHARGE

AT WAGRAM, WHICH HUMBLED AUSTRIA AND DETHRONED AN EMPRESS.

Probably the Model For Pickett's Assault on Cemetery Ridge—One Instance In Napoleon's Career When His Fiery Spirit Was Held In Check.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

NAPOLEON wasn't necessarily an impulsive fighter. He could bide his time and not fret his soul away in suspense. He once told his marshals during the very heat of battle to hold back their columns from a decisive charge for the space of 20 minutes, in order not to interrupt a false move which the enemy appeared to be making, and which, thanks to his foresight and self control, they carried out, placing victory within his grasp.

The Austrian campaign of Napoleon in 1809, culminating at Wagram, unlike either that of 1805, closing with Austerlitz, or the invasion of Prussia in 1806, ending at Jena, both of which were marvels in way of bold and telling strokes, proceeded with marvelous deliberation and patience. While the emperor's main army of 200,000 men contended with the Spaniards and English in the peninsula, and his garrison detachments were widely scattered along the Rhine and in Italy, his old antagonist, Francis Joseph of Austria, precipitated a new conflict by invading the territory of the French allies forming the confederation of the Rhine. Napoleon promptly ordered his generals in Germany and Italy as well as the reserves in France to march to the banks of the Danube, and the concentration went forward with the usual dispatch. The odds in numbers were likely to be more than two to one against France, hence it was necessary to make up for the lack of soldiers by rapid movements and blows, and in its first stages the campaign of 1809 was like those that had gone before. The emperor reached the front and assumed personal command of the troops on April 17. Five days later he whipped the Austrian leader, Archduke Charles, at Eckmuhl, in Bavaria, completely routing his forces and taking 20,000 prisoners. The Austrians then abandoned the border and left the road open for the French to seize Vienna. On May 13 Napoleon stood in Vienna with 90,000 troops, not half of the number which he had selected to meet him on the Danube, for the spring freshets in mountain rivers blocked their march more effectually than the Austrian bayonets had done. On the other hand, the Archduke Charles, with a freshly recruited army of Austrian veterans, lay intrenched on the opposite side of the river from the capital, while from all parts of the dominions reenforcements were hastening to join him. The available strength of Austria was placed at 560,000 men, and the problem which Napoleon had to face was how to prevent the concentration of the vast force to crush him. Half of his own troops were not up; an impassable river lay between him and the army, which he deemed it necessary to disperse before it grew more formidable, and the enemy's guns commanded every position available for the crossing of his troops. In this emergency Napoleon transported his army to the island of Lobau, in the Danube six miles below Vienna, where the channels on either side were narrow enough to be spanned by floating bridges.

On the 19th of May, in the night, the crossing was effected over both channels by 20,000 French troops. Next day, with Napoleon at their head, they seized two villages in front of the Austrian camp, and toward its close one village defended by only 7,000 French was attacked by 35,000 Austrians. The other village also became the scene of a desperate battle, and the troops in Vienna were hurried across the single bridge as rapidly as possible. When half of them had crossed and become engaged in desperate fighting to hold the ground, the bridge between the island and Vienna gave way under the force of the flood, carrying a column of troops with it. Soon afterward Lannes, Napoleon's favorite marshal, fell mortally wounded, and reluctantly the army was ordered to retreat to the island.

To most men the disaster would have seemed irreparable. It had cost the French 15,000 men, besides the loss of Lannes and the sting of defeat. But Napoleon recovered his spirits the very night of the retreat after taking a brief nap on a bed of straw. The heroic fighting of his soldiers had caused a loss to the Austrians of nearly 30,000 men, and he argued that weeks would pass before the archduke would recover from the blow. He immediately began preparations for a second attempt, and for this purpose built a permanent bridge to connect the island with the Vienna shore. In order to deceive the Austrians he built heavy fortifications opposite the point of his first crossing and mounted them with cannon to sweep the channel. Meanwhile a floating bridge ingeniously devised by Napoleon himself to give with the current, was constructed ready for launching some miles down the channel on the flank of the enemy's lines. A picked corps of 2,500 grenadiers was selected to dash across this bridge the instant it spanned the stream and carry the Austrian outposts. The army of Italy and the corps of Bernadotte and Davoust, from the German provinces, reached the island and swelled the forces to 150,000 men, with over 500 cannon and 40,000 horses.

The night selected for crossing was July 4, and fortunately for the enterprise it was ushered in with a blinding, deafening storm. To further bewilder the Austrian leader, who had massed his soldiers behind fortifications in front of Napoleon's former crossing, the French opened a bombardment across the channel at numerous places. Under cover of the storm and the cannonading the bridge of boats was put across without a mishap, so that the bold and difficult feat of the grenadiers had been carried out when day broke clear and bright. In a short time four additional bridges spanned the channel, over which 70,000 men marched and formed a line of battle. Strange to say, the Austrian leader looked calmly on from the distant heights of Wagram, the center and key point of his position. The Emperor Joseph stood by him, asking the meaning of the strange scene at the channel crossing.

"Sire," said the archduke, "the French have indeed forced the Danube, and I am letting a portion of them pass over that I may throw them into the river."

"Very good," responded his majesty, "but I wouldn't let too many of them come across."

The archduke counted upon destroying that half of Napoleon's army which should be first to cross before the other half could march to the rescue. But as he waited all day without beginning the attack, so that before nightfall on July 5 the bulk of the French had crossed. The army corps under Massena, Davoust, Bernadotte, Prince Eugene and MacDonald were in position in front of the Austrian center and flanks and everything in readiness to stand and take battle or to plunge forward and deliver it. So much had been accomplished since the disaster in May by patience and pertinacity. Napoleon had let go a weak hold and secured an infinitely superior one. What would he do with it?

In the first place, there existed a possibility that 45,000 fresh Austrian troops under Archduke John would join the enemy on Wagram heights that day from up the Danube, and Napoleon's first move was to dispatch a strong column of all arms to intercept their march. A heavy reserve of cuirassiers, artillery and the imperial guard remained on the plains along the river banks, while the corps of Davoust, Eugene, Bernadotte and Massena marched forward toward Wagram. The Austrians took the initiative in actual fighting and drove back the French left wing. All the guns of both armies came into play, and more than 1,200 pieces mingled their fire along a battle front nine miles long.

Having hurled back Napoleon's left wing, the Austrian commander in person led his own left across the rivulet of Russbach, which separated the combatants, to assail the French right under Davoust and Grouchy. Napoleon interpreted this boldness to mean that the Archduke John had come up with his corps and so led forward an immense reserve, with which he hurled the Austrians back over the stream, followed by Davoust and Grouchy, who drew up under the heights beyond. The French right secure, Napoleon returned to his left and attempted to recover lost ground there. In this he failed. Massena was wounded and compelled to ride in a carriage. His troops recoiled before the Austrians, and the latter pressed on toward the river until, approaching the old crossing of May opposite Napoleon's batteries on Lobau island, the guns there gave them a sudden and disastrous check. At that moment Napoleon's generals, Massena in particular, urged him to thrust forward the French center and secure the key point at Wagram. But he was immovable, with his eyes fixed upon Davoust's battlefield, where there stood in plain view of all the army a village crowning a height, which the Austrians stubbornly defended. Suddenly the smoke of battle rolled back beyond the village toward the Austrian rear. Davoust had won. The Austrian left had been broken. Turning to an aid, Napoleon exclaimed, "Quick, captain! Tell Massena to fall upon whatever is in front of him." To a general he cried, "Take 100 guns, 60 from my guard, and crush the enemy's column."

Then and there burst forth the most terrible artillery fire known to history until the hour of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. And this at Wagram was the prelude of another grand forlorn charge. The 100 cannon galloped to the front and opened fire. Bessieres led forward his cavalry, supported by the guard, but the Austrian batteries answered the cannonade with the fire of more than 200 pieces. The 20 regiments of horse under Bessieres succeeded in breaking the Austrian squares and riding among their cannon, which, however, plowed awful gaps in their ranks. The gallant leader was thrown from the saddle by a cannon ball which struck his steed and hurled him bodily from under his rider. But the grand charge moved on in spite of the cavalry disaster. MacDonald formed his storming column of 16,000 infantry under cover of the cannonade and dashed forward close upon the heels of the cavalry, aiming for the heights of Wagram. The front line in the center comprised 8 battalions, the flanks 13. On the right and left of the infantry flanks rode two mounted divisions, with a division of mounted grenadiers and one of foot guards as a grand reserve. In his pathway lay scores of French guns dismounted by the enemy's fire. His own ranks showed at every step the fresh gaps made by the Austrian shots, but still he pressed on until his corps was wiped out, and the pitiful handful of but 1,500 men clung to their eagles. Meanwhile Massena, on the left, and Davoust, on the right, taking advantage of the confusion in the Austrian lines caused by MacDonald's charge, hurled the enemy's flanks farther and farther from the center. Davoust finally turned to the left and opened his guns upon the heights of Wagram in MacDonald's front.

That ended the battle, and Napoleon sounded a halt, preferring to let well enough alone rather than risk his victory for the sake of cheap glory in capturing flags and guns from a fleeing enemy. The Austrians were beaten, and Napoleon won a long era of peace with the house of Hapsburg as well as its fair daughter, Maria Louisa, for a bride to supplant the Empress Josephine.

In Our Great Grandfather's Time,

big bulky pills were in general use. Like the "blunderbuss" of that decade they were big and clumsy, but ineffective. In this century of enlightenment, we have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver, stomach and bowel derangements in the most effective way.

Assist Nature a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, or dyspepsia, biliousness, pimples, blotches, eruptions, boils, constipation, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequaled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity, with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

A free sample of the "Pellets" (4 to 7 doses) on trial, is mailed to any address, post-paid, on receipt of name and address on postal card.

ONE OF THE BEST.

CATCHER M'GUIRE OF THE WASHINGTON CLUB.

One of the Old Time Players Who Still Remains Among the Stars of the Base Ball Profession—A Varied Career on the Diamond.

JAMES T. M'GUIRE, one of the catchers of the Washington club, of the National league and American association, was born Nov. 18, 1864, at Cleveland, Ohio, and it was on the vacant lots of his native city that he learned to play ball. He played with several local amateur teams, and gained considerable renown. He also played with prominent amateur and semi-professional teams in Ohio and Michigan before accepting his first regular professional engagement with the Terre Haute, Ind., club, in 1883. In 1884 he began the season with the Cleveland club of the National league, but before the season was far advanced he was released. He at once accepted an engagement with the Toledo club of the American association, and was one of the players who was transferred to the Detroit club of the National league at the close of that season. McGuire remained with the Detroit club during the season of 1885, taking part in thirty-four championship contests. During the winter of 1885-86 the Detroit club purchased the "big four" (Brouthers, White, Richardson and Rowe) from the Buffalo club, and then released McGuire, Casey and Wood to the Philadelphia club, so that the former club could have its desired ratified at the annual meeting of the National league. McGuire did good work for the Philadelphia club during the season of 1886, taking part that year in forty-eight championship contests. He remained with the Philadelphia throughout the season of 1887, taking part in forty championship games, and, besides catching well, he stood well up in the official batting averages of the National league. McGuire began the season of 1888 with the Philadelphia club, but was released at an early date because that club then had two first class catchers, Clements and Schriver. Immediately after he was released McGuire returned to his home, and joined the Cleveland club, then of the American association, taking part with the latter club in twenty-five championship games. In 1889 he joined the Toronto club of the International league, taking part that year in ninety-three championship contests, and he ranked well up in the official batting averages of that organization. McGuire was engaged by the Rochester club of the American association for the season of 1890, taking part that year in eighty-seven championship games, and ranking thirteenth in the official batting averages of that association. In 1891 McGuire joined forces with the Washington club of the American association, taking part in one hundred and six championship contests, in eighty-nine of which he filled the catcher's position. When the National league and American association was consolidated, during the winter of 1891-92, at that famous Indianapolis meeting, McGuire was one of the players engaged for the Washington team in the new twelve club league for the season of 1892, and he has since remained with the Washington club. McGuire is steady and reliable catcher, quick and accurate thrower to the bases, and a sure and heavy batsman. McGuire is pretty generally regarded as one of the best catchers for left handed pitchers in the profession.

A POPULAR MANAGER.

D. B. Kehler Remembered by His Employes.

Accidents, Incidents and Personal Mentions Concerning Men and Railway Affairs.

D. B. Kehler, manager of the Fort Wayne Furniture works, now looks through a handsome pair of gold framed nose spectacles. Yesterday morning as Mr. Kehler seated himself at his desk he found lying before him the spectacles, attached to which was a note "From the Boys," meaning the employes from the works.

Mr. Kehler was surprised. Placing the glasses in position he looked back through the past and discovered that less than a century ago yesterday he made his first appearance on earth, hence the spectacles must be a birthday present. He accepts this theory as the true one and feels very grateful for the kind remembrance.

Decatur, Ill., Dispatch: "The Wabash train dispatchers say that Engineer Roe, with engine 568 pulling the McKinley special, made the best run from Decatur to Tilton ever known. Some one called up Bob Douglass at the Wabash depot yesterday and asked: "Have you seen my driver around the depot?" "What driver?" asked the accommodating Bob. The San Francisco Chronicle says the Southern Pacific is continuing its policy of retrenchment by dismissing all the baggagemen employed on the road, the work on the trains to be performed hereafter by the express messengers through an understanding with Wells, Fargo & Co. The Wabash has again fixed up a traffic alliance with the Lake Shore road by which the former line will carry the cattle, hogs and sheep for a stock exporting company from the west to Toledo, where the trains will be turned over to the Lake Shore and taken to the sea board. In former years there were sometimes as high as eighteen cattle trains a week over the Wabash, all carrying stock for the exporting company.

The annual excursion, Grand Rapids to Fort Wayne, occurred today and the train brought in 700 people. There were seventeen coaches, all comfortably filled. The train was in charge of Conductor Grace. Last week the Grand Rapids company ran an excursion to Grand Rapids and had nearly 2,000 passengers. That city appreciates the advantages of these excursions to its business men. Visitors are met at the depot by a reception committee and headed by a brass band are marched to the public square where speaking or other entertaining features are provided.

At the regular monthly meeting of the directors of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company at Baltimore yesterday a dividend of 2 per cent. for the six months from January 1st to July 1st, 1894, was declared, payable on and after November 15th. Heavy losses of revenue were incurred by the protracted strike of about six weeks on coal and over two months on coke, resulting in heavy losses, not only on traffic on these articles, but on the industries connected with them. The net earning during the period named, notwithstanding this, were sufficient for a dividend of 2 per cent., leaving a balance to the credit of profit and loss.

What do you Wish for, in the way of easy work? You can have it, if you'll use Pearline. With anything you can think of, that water doesn't hurt, the easiest way to wash it or to clean it is to take Pearline. You can't do any harm, by doing away with that wearing rub, rub, rub. Besides, with almost everything, there are special reasons why you should use Pearline. For instance: There's no shrink to flannels, if they're properly washed with it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. JAMES PYLE, New York.

A "CAMP" TRAGEDY.

KILLED HIS FORMER SWEETHEART'S HUSBAND.

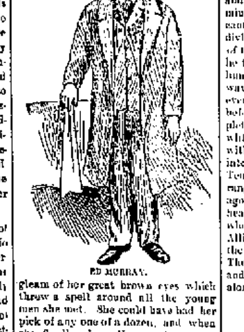

A STORY OF FIENDISH JEALOUSY AND LOVE.

Ed Murray a Sheer Figures in a Crime With Strange and Unusual Details—Flight and Capture of the Murderer.

JEALOUSY AND illicit love resulted in a horrible crime at Paris, Mo., several days ago when Ed Murray, a young miner, shot and killed "Zap" Houser because of his fatal attachment for Houser's wife.

The story of the tragedy is one replete with interest. Rose Engle, who married Houser, and who is still but a girl in years, has possessed a fascination over the men in her circle which has driven one to the commission of an unprovoked murder and several others to the melancholy state of mind which follows bitter disappointment. It is simple justice to her to state that her charms were exercised innocently; but their influence was none the less for that. She had suitors by the score. She could not be called beautiful, though all her worshipers undoubtedly thought her so. There was that in her manner and the gleam of her great brown eyes which threw a spell around all the young men she met. She could have had her pick of any one of a dozen, and when she finally chose Houser there were many honest fellows who were much cast down.

ED MURRAY.

Among those who courted the charming Rose were two brothers, Ed and John Murray. Both were passionately fond of her and both expected to win her. When she married Houser, John is said to have been quite dejected for awhile, but he became resigned to his fate, and as she could be nothing to him, wisely decided to put her out of his life. But not so with Edward. The spell was too strong upon him; he could not give her up altogether, even if she was the wife of another. He was a friend of Houser before marriage, and though in the first moments of his anger at his failure to win Rose's hand he had vowed vengeance on his successful rival, he latter made up his mind to resume his friendship with Houser in order that he might have the poor privilege of being occasionally near the woman he loved.

Houser had every confidence in his wife and he made Murray welcome. If the truth were known, he probably reflected what his feelings would have been had he lost the loved one, and a feeling of manly sympathy for the disappointed young miner prompted his cordiality. Murray came to the house often. Mrs. Houser was pleasant to him; no more. Probably she never suspected the depth of Murray's passion; she loved her husband and was happy, and it is not likely that she indulged in much speculation about the feelings of the unhappy man who had loved and lost. On the day of the murder Murray came to the house in apparently good spirits. It was Sunday and the three passed the time pleasantly in chatting. Houser and his wife had been indulging in little evidences of affection and finally she, in her impulsive way, went over to him and sat in his lap putting her arm around his neck.

"ZAP" HOUSER AND HIS WIFE.

The pent up passion in Murray was no longer to be controlled. The sight maddened him, and drawing his revolver he fired point blank at Houser. Houser fell into the arms of his wife, and in a few moments was dead. Without a word Murray left the house and took to the forest. One purpose alone guided him; to get as far from the scene of his crime as possible.

A terrible storm came up; the display of lightning was one of the most terrible ever seen in that section of the country. But the murderer sought no shelter, he pressed on and on through the darkness. By morning he had reached Huntsville thirty-two miles away. He had not proceeded far into the town when Sheriff Cameron of Randolph county, who had been notified of the murder, came up to him and put him under arrest. He did not appear to be surprised and said nothing. Probably after a night of such terrors as had passed through he was incapable of manifesting surprise at anything. He was taken back to the jail at Paris. The tragedy has excited great interest in Paris and the surrounding country, and the courtroom was crowded at Murray's hearing.

SAW GOD'S HAND.

And Thenceforward Clay Allison's Life Was a Changed One.

Clay Allison's life, recently ended in the southwest, was a tragic romance. Clay Allison was a desperado. He lived in the Red river country in the panhandle. His trigger finger was busiest in the early '80s. His record was twenty-one. He boasted of it. Twenty-one dead men whose graves were scattered from Dodge City to Santa Fe. The writer saw him kill Bill Chunk, a bad man, who shot people just for the fun of seeing them fall. The two men had no cause for quarrel. They were the prize killers of the same section of the country. It was a spirit of rivalry which made them swear to shoot each other on sight. Their friends bet on the result of their first chance encounter. They met one night at a crossroad inn in New Mexico and sat down at tables opposite each other, with their drawn six-shooters resting on their laps beneath their napkins. A plate of oysters on the shell had just been set before Chunk, when he dropped his hand, in careless fashion, and sent a ball at Allison beneath the table. Quick as a leap of lightning Allison's replied. A tiny red spot between Chunk's eyes marked where the bullet entered. The dead man rolled over on the table and was still, with his face downward in the dish of oysters. Allison was a large cattle owner. He went on a drive to Kansas City once, and while there fell in love, married, and took the woman to his home in the west to live. A child was born to them, a child whose face was as beautiful as the face of cherub, but whose poor little body was horribly deformed. Allison loved the child with the great love of his passionate nature. In the babe's misshapen and twisted form his superstitious mind read a meaning as significant as that of the message which the divine hand wrote on the palace walls of the king of old in Babylon. God, he thought, had visited a curse upon him for his sins. He quit his wild ways. He drank no more. No man ever after the birth of his child fell before his deadly pistol. He was completely changed. In the new life which followed he devoted himself with absorbing energy to his business interests. He became rich in time. Ten thousand cattle on the Texas ranges bore his brand. A short time ago he was driving from his ranch in a heavy road wagon to town. The front wheels jolted down into a deep rut. Allison was pitched headforemost to the ground. His neck was broken. The team jogged on into the distance and left him lying there dead and alone upon the prairie.

CLAY ALLISON.

A MOCK LORD.

Imagines That He Owns the Great Stanford Estate.

A man giving his name as Moton Lader was taken into custody by the police of San Jose, Cal., the other day. He arrived there a few days ago from Oklahoma having previously sent a telegram from Midland, Kan., to the cashier of the First National bank to pay no money to any one representing to be his attorney. As no one by that name had any dealings with the bank, the officials suspected the man was a crank. When he arrived he called at the bank and said he wanted no money paid out until he secured the advice of his attorney. The bank agreed to this and notified the police, who began shadowing the man. At Palo Alto he told the people in charge of the Stanford farm that he was the heir to the estate of the late Senator Stanford and directed that special care be observed in the conduct of the farm until he took charge. He says he is a prince; that his title is Lord Milton Stanford; that he was stolen when a child, and that ten years ago he learned he was a near relative to Stanford, but only recently decided to make himself known and claim the property. He says he saw Mrs. Stanford on the streets in San Francisco a few days ago and followed her some distance, but she eluded him.

SHE PLAYED HEROINE.

A Tennessee Girl Takes This Means of Winning Favor.

Alice Higgins, a pretty 17-year-old orphan who has made her home for some months with the family of A. W. Allbright in Highland Park, Tenn., has confessed to setting fire to the barn of her benefactors, to an attempted robbery and to throwing stones through the windows at night. The family have been terrorized for the past two weeks, thinking they were the victims of some malicious person. Each time the young woman came to the rescue. The fire was discovered and put out by her heroic efforts. A few nights afterward, according to the story she told next morning, she observed that robbers were trying to make even break into the building and frightened them off. Next morning she told the family of a plot she overheard to kill Mr. Allbright. The clue that brought her confession was the discovery that only windows of her room were broken, and then with a stone which was covered with blood and a few woman's telltale hairs clinging to it. The guilty girl gave as the reason for her conduct that she heard the Allbrights intended to send her back to her father in Birmingham and she devised this way of acting the mock heroine to bring herself back into their good graces. She has been sent back to her father.

Reimer Family Held.

The Reimer family at Dalton, Ill., have been held for court on the charge of conspiracy in the recent fire there Thursday. Rose, the school teacher, attempted to burn the very house occupied by the family. The fire was extinguished and the kitchen found to be saturated with oil. Old man Reimer on the stand denies his former confession that his wife started the fire. Rose has now offered to plead guilty to save the family.

FOR THE

Removal and Prevention of Scale in Steam Boilers.

The attention of engineers and owners of steam boilers is called to the Red Seal Boiler Compound. It will successfully remove the scale from steam boilers, and also prevent the formation of scale. It is well known that the scale is a powerful non-conductor, and that the waste of fuel is in proportion to the thickness of the scale which becomes attached to the shell, flues, tubes and other parts of the boilers causing a loss of fuel ranging from one to thirty-seven per cent.

The Red Seal Boiler Compound is entirely free from acids, and does not injure or corrode the iron. In its action it does not vaporize or pass off with the steam. It can be used with perfect safety by Breweries, Dye Houses, Hotels, Refineries, Laundries, and many other establishments too numerous to mention, where pure live steam is required.

It will prevent incrustation and the forming of new scale, without injury to the boiler. The mineral impurities are gradually softened and dissolved, and are then held in suspension until such time as the boiler is blown out under pressure, or washed out when cold.

The compound is in powder form, dissolves easily in warm water, and, as a liquid, can be applied to the boiler through the pump or injector, or in any other convenient way.

All we ask is a trial of Red Seal Boiler Compound, and we will convince the most skeptical that it is a superior article to many of the so-called boiler compounds on the market.

Directions and price list cheerfully furnished on application.

Attorney Charles H. Worden has written a letter in which he fully explains the recent trouble between Professors Klein and Mengelsdorf, of the Zion Lutheran school, and the boys Hullbery and Kuhnert. The facts as given in Mr. Worden's letter would exonerate the teachers and also Mr. Wolf from any blame in the case, which resulted in an action for assault being brought. It will be remembered that this suit was dismissed.

Thirty cents of every dollar saved by buying your goods of JAMES M. KANE, 24 Calhoun Street.

The present generation has been rich in old men who have preserved the full measure of their powers until they were beyond the age of four score years. In England we have seen the "Grand Old Man" Gladstone holding firmly the reins of Premier up to the age of 85 and then only resigned because of an affection of his eyes caused by a missile thrown at him by a vandal a few years ago. Germany has given us many examples in the same line. In this country, notwithstanding its intense activity, examples have not been wanting of men eminent in statesmanship beyond the age of 80 years. No one who attended the Minneapolis convention will ever forget the stirring address of our Col. R. W. Thompson before that immense audience of 15,000 people. It was the eighty-third anniversary and the convention paused for a few minutes to do honor to the old man. The writer happened to be sitting with a company of citizens of another state, and heard their enthusiastic comments on the character of his address and on his clear, powerful voice, that was plainly audible all over that immense hall. Since that time he has done a large share of the work in preparing his "Recollections of Sixteen Presidents," a work that reads as if dictated by a strong man in his prime. The other day, when President Harrison spoke at Terre Haute, it was Col. Thompson's strong voice that introduced him with eloquent words to the great crowd of people who had assembled. Those who have the opportunity of reading Col. Thompson's new book will find it full of evidence, not only of long and varied experience, but of a strong analytic and philosophic mind, that read aright the meaning of that which he saw and heard.

The living advertisement party is a novel and laughable amusement for an evening at home. It also makes a feature for a church or charitable entertainment. Unique and well known figures of advertisements form striking tableaux, while some one with talent for the comic recites humorous rhymes to fit the pictures. The audience should sit in the dark to give the best effect to the lighted tableaux. For a party at home it makes a jolly idea, and to the person who recognizes the most advertisements impersonated a prize can be given.

KILLED HIS OWN CHILD.

Details of a Crime which has Startled New Jersey.

Lawrence E. Hoffman of Hightstown, a village about twelve miles from New Brunswick, N. J., killed his child the other night. The killing was accidental, so far as the child was concerned, although it resulted from an effort on the part of the father to end the life of the child's mother. Hoffman is a well-to-do merchant. He was out drinking and reached home about midnight in frenzied state. His wife reproached reproached him for his condition, and he attacked her, but she beat him off. Then, crazed with anger and liquor, the man rushed into the woodshed, back of the house, and seized an axe. When his wife saw him returning she fled from the room on the first floor, where they had been, and ran upstairs. He followed her, and as he reached the landing he threw the axe at her as she was entering the sleeping room, where she intended to lock herself in with her child. The child was lying in a crib placed against the wall at the side of the room farthest from the door. The edge of the blade ripped open the child's abdomen, causing a wound seven inches long. Hoffman rushed into the room, intent on ending his wife's life, but the woman had abandoned all thought of herself and rushed to the crib. Hoffman reached the side of the crib before he realized what he had done. Then he rushed from the house and summoned a doctor and disappeared. It was then after midnight. Two hours later he reached home again, sobered and remorseful. A constable was waiting for him and locked him up. The physician could do nothing for the little one that wailed and it died.

The largest gain in the net profits of the Association was made during the year of the panic, from July 1, 1893, to July 1, 1894.

The Association is now selling installment stock, on which you pay 70 cts. per share per month, until the maturity of the stock. No other perfectly safe investment can be found that pays as well as the installment stock of a well managed Building and Loan Association. It is as secure in a panic as in times of prosperity.
